MATE SHOT BY WIFE IN COURT AS WOMAN JUDGE TAKES OATH

Today

What Have Women Done?
Laughing at Bandits.
Weapon Against Reds.
Britain in Jerusalem.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

WOMAN SUFFRAGE in this country was 10 years old yesterday, and its opponents ask scornfully, "What have women done?"

They have done many things, and most important they have made politicians ask, "What do the women want?"

Women want what is right, and when they are not deceived concerning prohibition or pacifism, they are the most powerful and useful influence in politics.

IF MEN WITH masks or handkerchiefs on their faces enter your house during an entertainment, pointing guns and saying, "Stick' em up," don't laugh and think that it is a friendly joke. It usually is not a joke.

At a Cleveland party masked men entered and guests "tittered and laughed." One guest, Miller Wilkinson, 25-year-old student at Princeton, helped to drive out the intruders, threw one of them down, and was fatally wounded by the brother of the man whom he had seized.

The murderer told the police: "He was after my brother."

MR. LEHMAN, lieutenant governor of New York, rich and intelligent, tells others of the prosperous class that the best weapon against Communism and radicalism generally is HIGH WAGES, "leading to prosperity, happiness, self-respect and pride in home and country."

Mr. Lehman is right. All the alleged Russian propaganda multiplied by a thousand could not create as many dissatisfied "radicals" in this country as a year or two of depression followed by a foolish attempt to reduce wages.

CUT SIXTY BILLIONS a year in wages to forty billions and you would cut down prosperity by much more than twenty billions a year. It is the amount paid in wages above the bare cost of existence that creates prosperity.

A LEAGUE OF NATIONS committee appointed to watch nations exercising mandates for so-called "inferior peoples," criticizes Britain severely for incompetency in connection with last year's murderous riots in Jerusalem.

The British idea was to criticize others and more or less boss the League of Nations—and criticism does not sit well on the British stomach.

BRITAIN REPLIES that it could not know that murders were about to be committed, or understand the intense feeling connected with Jerusalem's "Wailing Wall," claimed by Jews and Arabs.

Henceforth the British will limit Jewish emigration to Jerusalem, to avoid further friction.

A CRIMINAL develops an ingenious plan for extorting money. Following the disappearance of a young girl, the would-be extortionist telegraphed the girl's father, telling him to attach $10,000 to the foot of a carrier pigeon, provided for the purpose, and release the pigeon.

The pigeon could not betray the conspirators. And if an airplane could follow it, without frightening the bird, the airplane would surely warn the conspirators.

Police think the schemers know nothing about the girl and are merely speculating on her disappearance.

ARDENT DRYS will learn with regret that Mrs. Corrine Roosevelt Robinson, sister of President Roosevelt, long an earnest advocate of temperance, denounces the prohibition law. She says "an unenforceable law is a dangerous spot for graft and corruption."

She will run as a delegate to the Republican convention in New York state, that she may have a chance to tell what she thinks.

UNDER OLD GERMAN LAW, much older than the war, the flying machine, submarine or even the railroad, a man and woman living together, not married, are called "immoral and a public nuisance."

The law has not changed officially, but court decisions tend to a lenient view of what was once unforgiveable. A high German court says "offenses against marriage concern only those involved," which means, they are none of the public's business.

MARRIAGES IN THE rural districts of the Irish Free State are diminishing. Once Irish girls came to this country, worked, saved and went back to marry farmers that they had known in childhood. Their savings helped the country.

Now they come, stay and marry here, returning, if at all, to visit their parents.

The loss for Ireland is a gain for the United States.

TOWED AUTO THEFT LAID TO TWO

Employes at 'Impounded' Car Garage Held for 'Stripping' Machines

Two employes of the Center Garage, Roberts street, in which impounded autos are stored, were held for court today following testimony they had stolen a wheel and tires from a truck towed to the place.

R. T. Davidson, who has a parking garage at 433 First avenue, told Magistrate J. J. O'Connor in Central Police Court that a truck had been taken from his place and towed to the Center Garage.

Harry Washington, Negro, of Larimer avenue, and Ashley Blow, Negro, of Junilla street, employes at the Center Garage, were held for court after Detective Joseph Lavery said they admitted stealing the tires and wheel from the truck.

A wheel was found in Blow's home, Lavery said. Washington admitted at the hearing he had stolen the wheel and the tires and had sold them to Blow.

ROLPH LEADING IN CALIFORNIA

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 27.—(AP.)—The governorship of California seemed almost within reach for James Rolph, Jr., San Francisco's picturesque mayor, as returns from the primary piled up an ever-growing lead in his favor today.

Rolph was leading Gov. C. C. Young and Buron Fitts, district attorney of Los Angeles County, by a liberal margin when two-thirds of the Republican vote had been tabulated. The nomination is considered tantamount to election.

GETS BIG HOME VOTE

Returns from 7,156 of the 10,283 precincts in the state gave Rolph 277,748; Young, 236,697, and Fitts, 209,145.

Rolph carried his own city by a surprising majority, polling 73,666 against 39,178 for Young and 6,718 for Fitts. Despite the refusal of either Young or Fitts to admit defeat, Rolph supporters

$2,000,000 JOB AT CLAIRTON

Carnegie Steel Company has awarded a contract to the Koppers Rheolaveur Company, subsidiary to the Koppers Company, for the construction of a $2,000,000 coal-washing plant at the Clairton By-Products Coke Works.

The plant will be one of the largest and most complete installations of its kind. Its construction follows several years of study. It will have a capacity of 12,000 tons of coal per day of 20 hours.

The plant will be used to remove non-coking materials from the coal and to reduce the content of sulphur. Three 1,000-ton storage bins will be constructed over the washing plant building. About one year will be required to complete the work.

Heat Ends Girl Flier's Record Try

LE BOURGET, France, Aug. 27.—(AP.)—Terrific heat which caused her to have a slight sunstroke in midair today forced Maryse Bastie, French aviatrix, to the ground in the midst of her attempt to break the world's duration flight record, Mlle. Bastie had been in the air 18 hours when she was all but overcome.

Although on the point of fainting the girl brought her airplane down to a safe landing.

Coolidge Sees Economic Hope in New Industries

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Aug. 27.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

A study of the economic development of this country, of its capacity to produce and consume, of its manufacturers and its markets, reveals that general business never has found any saturation point.

We have been considering the present as a time of depression. Yet it is now reported that within the past few months $125,000,000 worth of miniature golf outfits have been put into operation. During the worst period of 1921 it was the newly-perfected radio that caught the public fancy, with sales soon reaching hundreds of millions of dollars. Before that came the motion picture, which now sells over one hundred million admission tickets each week. Meantime the automobile and aircraft industries have been created.

Calvin Coolidge

Twenty-five years ago only a few people were engaged in these enterprises. The number now runs into the millions. We can see in these new occupations the natural remedy for labor temporarily displaced by machinery. What course our great financial and scientific resources will take in the next era of development we do not know. But all past experience teaches that it will be an important advance in the economic welfare of the nation.

CALVIN COOLIDGE.

MATE DEAD, WIFE'S ACT TO GO ON

Despite Husband's Suicide, Adah Straub, True to Stage Code, to Fill Engagement

"On with the show," that unwritten code of stage folk, forced Adah Straub to carry on with her partner, Irene Jones, today as her husband, L. V. Straub, 29, of 5730 Beacon street, lay dead in a New Kensington undertaker's establishment.

Straub ended his life while seated in his sedan on the Freeport road, near New Kensington, by firing a bullet into his mouth, the coroner's report said. He was a salesman for a Chicago clothing firm.

CAME FROM CALIFORNIA

His wife, known as "ten fingers" of the "Twenty Fingers of Sweetness," a piano duo act scheduled for KDKA tonight at 7:15, came here recently from KFI, Los Angeles, where she was known as Betty McKee.

Miss Jones is her partner in the "Twenty Fingers of Sweetness" number and aside from the radio performance, they also were scheduled to appear at the Enright this afternoon. The show will go on, both women said.

Mrs. Straub refused to talk of her husband's action and seemed unable to understand what had caused him to shoot himself. Her address was also given as 5730 Beacon street.

BODY FOUND IN AUTO

Straub's body was found slumped behind the steering wheel of his auto by three engineers for the State Highway Department. It was identified by a cousin, James Straub. Deputy Coroner Charles Brush, of New Kensington, will conduct an inquest tonight.

Mrs. Straub and Miss Jones will end their engagement here tomorrow, it was said.

Attorney John S. Robb, speaking for Mrs. Straub, said that her husband had been in ill health. He contracted malaria fever while serving as a Marine in South America.

He had been under a physician's care recently, Robb said, and he was thought to have become despondent over a recurrence of ill health. The couple have one son, Robert, 6.

Straub was a Pittsburgher, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Straub, of Hampton Hall, Dithridge street, who are absent on vacation.

SHOOTS MATE AT COURT

MRS. CLARA PALSCAK, 21

Mrs. Palscak, involved in the first case that new Judge Sara Soffel was to hear, whipped a small automatic from her purse, fired three shots at her husband, whom she had haled to court. "He wouldn't come back to me," she screamed as officers seized her.

Wounded Man Struggles With Woman Until She Is Overpowered by Officers

The office of the Desertion and Non-support Court was a scene of panic shortly before noon today when Clara Palscak, 21, appearing in the court against her estranged mate, Steve, 24, shot him through the abdomen, perhaps fatally wounding him.

In another courtroom, three doors from the scene of the shooting, Judge Sarah Soffel was being sworn in as a jurist, after which she was to sit on the bench with Judge Richard A. Kennedy in judgment of non-support cases. The case of Palscak and his wife was the first case listed for the new jurist. Neither of the judges were aware of the shooting until informed by a Sun-Telegraph reporter.

VICTIM UNCONSCIOUS

In the Mercy Hospital Palscak was reported dying with a bullet in his abdomen. He was unconscious.

In another room in the county detective bureau, the woman—cool and hard—grilled by a dozen sleuths, calmly informed them:

"I took the gun he left at home, and put it into my handbag. After remonstrating with him in the probation office, I pulled the weapon from the purse, and it accidentally discharged when he twisted my hand."

The woman, who lives with her family at 64 Beelan street, and who has been estranged from her mate for the past three weeks, was engaged in conversation with Bess Parkins, in charge of the probation office, when Palscak, who resides in Gazzane street, entered.

WOUND PAINLESS

Mrs. Palscak asked:

"May I speak with my husband?"

Miss Parkins nodded her consent, and the woman approached

M'GOVERN SIGNS FOR MACHINES

Everything was in readiness for the Poole Engineering Company to begin work on voting machines it promised to have here by October 15, it was announced at the County Commissioner's office today, when Commission C. C. McGovern signed the contract with the concern.

Commissioner McGovern had withheld his signature from the contract because, he held, there was no stipulation in it guaranteeing the delivery of more than 75 voting machines.

He signed after the other commissioners agreed to send a letter to the company asking them to guarantee the delivery of 225 more machines, bringing the total number to 300.

Stribling Hops Off For Chicago Races

ATLANTA, Ga., Aug. 27.—(AP.)—The monoplane "King of the Canebreaks," piloted by its owner, W. L. (Young) Stribling, hopped off for Chicago and the national air races today.

Stribling, who holds a transport pilot's license and a commission in the Army Reserve, was accompanied by George Shealy, Atlanta flier, as co-pilot.

The Georgia heavyweight boxer said he would not enter any of the events, and was attending the meet merely as a spectator.

Auburn Mutineers In Chair's Shadow

OSSINING, N. Y., Aug. 27.—(INS.)—Three mutineers in the Auburn prison outbreak will die in the electric chair at Sing Sing prison tomorrow night unless Gov Roosevelt intervenes. The three men, Claude Udwine, William Force and Jesse Thomas, were hopeful for clemency.

Buffalo Man Leads Swim Marathon

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 27.—(AP.)—With about a third of the 15-mile course completed in the Canadian national exhibition Marathon swim today, Frank Pritchard, of Buffalo, N. Y., was in front of a field of nearly 200 swimmers by 250 yards. His nearest competitor was the youthful Isador Spondor, of Port Colborne, Ont., who was traveling at a remarkably fast clip in an effort to cut down the Buffalo man's lead.

Among prominent contestants were Ernest Vierkoetter, German baker now living in Canada, and George Young of Toronto, conqueror of Catalina channel.

WOMAN JUDGE TAKES OATH

Before a bench bedecked with flowers, President Judge Richard Kennedy, in County Court today, administered the oath of office to Judge Sara M. Soffel, Pennsylvania's first woman jurist.

The courtroom was jammed with friends of Judge Soffel, and with judges and court officials from Common Pleas and Criminal Court. Judge Soffel spent the morning receiving congratulations in the courtroom.

Pittsburgh Flier's Tear Gas Clears Chicago Cafe

CHICAGO, Aug. 27.—They wouldn't give George Dickson, Pittsburgh aviator, anything to eat in Henrici's restaurant, early today, so he saw to it that nobody else could eat anything, either.

G. E. Dickson

Dickson, who flew in yesterday to attend the national air races, walked into the well-known Loop cafe shortly after midnight and was told by the manager, Fred Bethke, that he could not be served as the kitchen was closed. Dickson asked, indicating about 50 guests who were still at the tables,

"What are these people eating, sawdust?"

Bethke explained that the others were eating the usual food but that they had arrived before midnight. Dickson replied:

"If I can't eat, neither can they."

Then he took out a tear gas gun, shaped like a fountain pen, pulled the trigger and released a cloud of gas.

The guests fled to the street. Dickson was arrested.

George Dickson is one of Pittsburgh's most socially prominent amateur fliers. He is a son of Charles E. Dickson, of 5200 Westminster place, and a graduate of Shady Side Academy. He maintains an airplane at Rodgers Field.

Pilot Dickson is kinder to animals. On April 23 he flew over the city scattering the Humane Society's printed plea for kindness to animals.

LEGUIA LIES ILL ABOARD STEAMER

Condition Serious as Junta Promises People Reprisal For 'Misdeeds' of Regime

LIMA, Peru, Aug. 27. (AP.)—Augusto B. Leguia, an ill old man of 67, tossed feverishly in bed aboard the cruiser Almirante Grau in Callao Harbor today and sought a way out of the trap in which his political enemies, long suppressed, had caught him.

Increasingly ominous reports reached his bedside from Lima, where a military junta replacing his 11-year regime promised the populace that he would be brought back and punished for the "misdeeds" of his dictatorship.

Friends and the diplomatic corps in Lima sought from Gen. Manuel Maria Ponce heading the military junta assurances of his safety, but countering their efforts were the activities of returning exiles and freed political prisoners with profound convictions of old and stupendous scores to settle.

resident whose overnight from dictator of one of the most powerful South American republics to that of a prisoner awaiting judgment was said today to be seriously although not gravely ill of a uremic attack which struck him down Monday afternoon, not many hours after his resignation.

An American physician Dr McCormick visited him three times Tuesday aboard the Almirante Grau. After the last visit he said his patient had a temperature of 100.4 and was feeling somewhat better. The statement stilled reports current in Lima that he was dead or dying.

The Almirante Grau returned to Callao Harbor with the former president only after events which inspired a false hope of freedom in exile in him. Leaving Monday morning after his resignation, the officers of the cruiser thought to take their prisoner to Panama and land him there.

Milton K. Young, unopposed for the Democratic nomination for Governor and who also ran on the G. O. P. ticket will oppose the Republican victor in the November election. His appearance on the Republican ballot was criticized by Governor Young's supporters as a move to confuse Republican voters.

POLLED ON BOTH SIDES

Milton Young polled 22,583 as a Democrat and 23,705 as a Republican.

Although Rolph did not raise the prohibition question, Fitts and Young pointed to the San Franciscan's alleged anti-dry tendencies in their pre-election drives. Young and Fitts received the informal support of the prohibition organizations.

Rolph, mayor of San Francisco for nearly 20 years, is a native son. Gov. Young is a native of New Hampshire. Fitts came from Texas.

GUARD AGAINST TONG WAR HERE

Fearing an outbreak of Chinese tong warfare, city detectives today were keeping a close watch on Pittsburgh Chinatown.

Two detectives were detailed to the Hip Sing headquarters in Second avenue, while others were ordered to watch the On Leong activities in Third avenue. Inspector of Detectives Frank R. Boyd ordered his sleuths to be on the alert when a rumor that one of the factions had imported hatchet men here from New York.

The arrest Monday night of an armed Chinese and a woman who were taken in a taxicab at the Boulevard of the Allies and Grant street created considerable excitement in the Oriental colony, detectives said. The Chinese gave his name as Yee See, and his companion was docketed as Leto Robinson, 27, of Robinson street, according to detectives.

At a hearing in the Central Police Court, See was held for court and the Robinson woman was fined $50 or 60 days in the workhouse following her refusal to testify.

The laundry business of H. E. Wing at 922 Western avenue, today was being carried on as usual but behind closed doors with police on the outside watching for rival tongsmen who threatened him with death if he did not move.

yesterday, preparatory to taking the oath of office today.

Asked concerning her activities outside the law, Judge Soffel said:

"I have always been an outdoors enthusiast. I like nothing better than to cast a line for trout, ride a horse, row a boat and explore the woods. That's what I did most of the time on vacation. At home I like to cultivate the garden—my father's pride and joy."

Her father, former Alderman Jacob Soffel, of Mt. Washington, an invalid, spends most of his time in an easy chair among the shrubs and bushes she grew.

Judge Soffel lives with her father and two sisters at 16 Greenbrush avenue.

She was appointed by Gov. John S. Fisher to succeed Judge Sylvester Snee as judge of the County Court. She learned of the appointment while vacationing.

EATON PLACES SALARY AT $23,000

Pro-Merger Attorneys End Quizzing of Financier; Testifies on Syndicate

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Aug. 27. (AP.)—The defense finished its attack on Cyrus S. Eaton's credibility as a witness in the suit against the Youngstown Sheet and Tube-Bethlehem Steel merger when Attorney Newton D. Baker concluded today his cross-examination of the Cleveland financier.

He was turned back to the plaintiffs for re-direct examination and one of his first revelations was that he receives a salary of $23,000 a year. Of this sum, $18,000 is paid by Otis & Company, in which he is a partner, and $5,000 by Sheet & Tube for his services as a member of the executive committee, Eaton testified.

DEFENSE EXHIBITS

The cross-examination saw a big batch of defense exhibits introduced to the record, several of them bearing on the defense charge that three members of Eaton's anti-merger proxy committee were not stockholders of record in Sheet & Tube.

Attorney Park Chamberlain, of plaintiffs' counsel, reported there was an order showing the transfer of Youngstown shares to W. H. Foster, Philip Schaff and Julius Kahn by Otis & Company, but no book entries to show how the stock was paid for. These three served on the anti-merger committee.

FORMED SYNDICATE

Another exhibit was a summary of the Republic Steel Corporation merger put together by the Eaton interests. Eaton testified Otis and Company had formed a syndicate to underwrite this merger and that commissions totaled $1,600,000. Eaton also testified that Otis and Company received an option on 200,000 shares of common stock in the new Republic at $75 a share and Baker wanted to know if the benefits of the option which extended over a period of two years were offered by Otis and Company to other members of the underwriting syndicate.

ALL INFORMED

Eaton answered that all were informed of the option and that they could participate conditionally. However, he did not remember the conditions.

Baker later introduced newspaper stories published here in March during the bitter proxy fight, in which Eaton was quoted as saying that he did not receive commissions in the Trumbull or Republic merger but that the plan of these consolidations was to enhance the position of the companies for ultimate profits.

Eaton said he had given this statement to the newspaper varbally.

Dillner is to be arraigned in Superior Court at Michigan City next week. Prosecuter W. W. Bozarth said Dillner indicated he probably will plead guilty and quoted him as declaring he "didn't care what happened" to him.

Two extra guards were placed around the jail here by the sheriff as a precaution against possible violence, although there was no surface indication of trouble.

ODOR OF STILL CAUSES RAID

Prohibition agents' keen sense of smell today was credited for the confiscation of a 150-gallon still in a shack off the Bethel road, Center Township, in Indiana County yesterday.

A half dozen agents traveling along the road in an automobile came to a halt when they detected the odor of mash. Investigating, they found the still, 1,200 pounds of sugar and 1,700 gallons of mash in the shack, it was reported. The owner's identity could not be learned.

CATCH FUGITIVE AFTER 12 MILES

After searching 12 miles over hill and dale, two West End policemen early today caught up with Francis Kirby, 17, alias Francis Canelli, of 1115 Stanhope street, who they say is the youth who late yesterday robbed Emma Grosser, 22, of 3131 Chartiers avenue, of $110 and $28 in checks, which she was taking to the Sheraden bank. The loot was found in his possession, police report.

Motorcycle Patrolmen LeRoy Gibson and Thomas Beggs questioned Miss Grosser about the man who had snatched the envelope containing the checks and cash. She gave them a good description of the coatless youth, telling them he ran up Chartiers avenue, in the direction of Ingram.

The police followed, making inquiries every few blocks. They abandoned their motorcycle in the City View district, above Sheraden, and set out on foot over the hillsides. At midnight they arrived at Pittock, in the Fleming Park district of Stowe Township. There they came upon a youth answering the description. They stopped and questioned him. Search of his clothing, the officers said, yielded the envelope containing the loot.

Miss Grosser, a clerk in the P. H. Butler store at 3100 Chartiers avenue, was taking the day's receipts to the bank when the robbery occurred. She told police she had paid particular attention to the robber, as she had noticed him following her.

Kirby, or Canelli, lodged in the West End police station on a suspicious person charge, will be given a hearing today.

BANDITS RAID BARBECUE STAND

Proprietors, Employes Lined Up as Robbers Loot Till, Not Disturbing Games

While more than a dozen persons were playing miniature golf on a brilliantly-lighted course, five young robbers held up the adjoining barbecue of Victor Covert in Babcock boulevard this morning, and escaped with $18.35.

None of the early-morning golfers was aware of the holdup.

Mr. and Mrs. Covert were in the kitchen of the barbecue. J. Bell and Harold Hunt, waiters, were behind the counter.

A dusty truck drove up to the establishment, and the five youths alighted and entered.

TILL LOOTED

One went into the kitchen with a revolver and ordered Covert into the dining room.

Covert and the two waiters were lined against a wall. One bandit took $60 out of the cash register. Another took $35 from Hunt. The party then fled in the truck toward Millvale.

Not until Covert ran outside with a shotgun did the golfers learn that a robbery had occurred. He operates both the golf course and the barbecue stand.

GAS STATION HELD UP

The golfers and course attendants had believed the young men on the truck were delivering supplies.

Engaged in a hand-to-hand battle on the B. & O. railroad tracks in McKeesport with a robber who had taken $40 from him, George Anderson, manager of the Atlantic Refining Company service station in Fifth avenue, McKeesport, leaped for his life as the whistle of a passenger train warned him.

The robber also leaped from the tracks, and when the train had passed, Anderson could find no trace of him. The man, Anderson said, after robbing the station, forced him with a pistol at his back, to accompany him. They had just started to fight when the train whistle sounded.

MOORE ARRESTS MOORE

Times are hard when one Moore has to arrest another.

Lieutenant Harry Moore of the North Side Police district arrested Harry Moore, 36, of 513 Arch street, last night when it was reported that Moore was seen attempting to leave a clothing store through the transom with a box under his arm.

According to a police report, two men noticed Moore entering the store. One pursued him, the other called police.

Moore was arrested at East North Diamond street and West Diamond street by the police lieutenant.

Apparently Moore broke the glass of the transom with his hand, which was badly cut, and gathered as much clothing as possible into the box. When he noticed the two men watching him he fled, leaving behind his loot. The blood-stained box was found on the transom.

Moore was lodged in the North Side station for a hearing, after his hand was dressed in Allegheny General Hospital.

The widow, Berenice Slick, of Oklahoma City, Okla., receives one-third of the estate. The remainder is left in trust for the three children.

The Slick home in Oklahoma City also is left to the widow. The children are Thomas B., Jr., Betty and Earl. At 18, the daughter will receive $5,000 a year until she is 30. Hose Turned on Workers Made Couzens Pro-Labor

DETROIT, Aug. 27.—(AP.)—James Couzens, Michigan's senior senator, reached his fifty-eighth birthday anniversary today, and recalled the incident 16 years ago which he said converted him to the principles which caused his political opponents to call him "radical" and "irresponsible."

The incident occurred when Couzens was a chieftain of industry. He said:

"I confess there was a time when I was not so keen about the rights and interests of the working man. I recall a winter day in 1914, when, with a stroke of the pen I ordered the discharge of several thousand workers of the Ford Motor Company, of which I was then general manager.

"I stood in the office window and saw these men milling about outside the gates. It was bitterly cold, and under these conditions I saw the hose turned on them.

"I got converted right there. After 48 hours of discussion, Henry Ford agreed to a raise of wages from $2.30 a day to $5, in the hope that such men as we could retain might save something out of the increased wages for any contingency of lay-off in the future. And for that I want to pay my warmest compliments to Mr. Ford."

The reference to Ford was one of the few Couzens has made publicly in recent years to the man in whose association he rose from a $200-a-month clerkship to immense wealth in 16 years.

It was about a year after the incident related that Couzens left the Ford company after a disagreement with Mr. Ford. Later he sold his interest in the firm for $30,000,000.

WIFE SHOOTS MAN IN COURT

Palscak. After a moment of conversation, three shots were heard, according to Miss Parkins. Miss Parkins said she saw Palscak wrestle with the woman and then slump to the floor.

One witness to the shooting Probation Officer Mary Mellody of Mary street, South Side, declared the victim was unaware at first that he had been shot. Describing the scene, she said:

"I think she fired three shots. As she fired the first shot, he got back of a chair. Then she fired two more. He ran, then suddenly turned to grasp the gun.

"I said: 'Are you shot?'

"As he held the gun, apparently unaware he had been hit, he replied: 'I don't think I am.'"

A score of clerks, tipstaffs and others were in the office at the time, and after the shooting the woman was taken to the county detectives' office.

Besides Miss Parkins, other witnesses to the shooting included Dr. C. B. Ellis, jail physician; Virginia Keefe, Margaret Levy and Mary Malloy, clerks in the court office, and S. C. Messig, a tipstaff. Many others were in the courtroom at the time.

Mrs. Palscak told officers that she had been pleading with her husband to return to her, but he refused to answer her. She then, according to her statement, drew the gun from her purse.

GRAPPLES WITH HER

At this move, Palscak grappled with her, she said, the gun was discharged. She said only one shot was fired, but other witnesses aver there were three. One of the bullets, Miss Parkins said, thudded into a desk near where she was standing.

The Palscaks have been married five years. Two years after their marriage they were separated, and lived together again after a brief period. Three weeks ago, the woman said, they again separated. She said he failed to support her, and that she brought him into the non-support court.

The woman's complete statement follows:

"He left his gun at home, and I got it and put it in may handbag. It was in my purse when I entered the Courthouse. When I saw him in the probation office, I went to him and asked him if he would come back home. We argued. I asked him several questions, but he refused to answer them.

"I then removed the gun from my purse—I don't know why I brought it—and my husband, seeing it, grappled with me. The gun went off and I saw he was shot. We have been married five years, and during that time we have had nothing but arguments. We have been separated before."

LINKS HUSBAND IN DROWNING

On information they received during their questioning of Mrs. Clara Palscak, held in the shooting of her husband in a County Court room today, county detectives have reopened the investigation of the death of Andrew Walhold, of 27 Chazam street, whose body was dragged from the Monongahela River under the Twenty-second street bridge, August 3.

According to detectives the woman told them her husband engaged in a fist fight with Walhold a few days before the man disappeared. During the altercation, according to the woman's story, Walhold received a black eye. She told detectives her husband said Walhold would be found in the river.

It is recorded in the coroner's office that Walhold's body revealed evidence of a bruised right eye. An inquest into his death decided the man was "found drowned."

Further discussing her husband's affairs, detectives say, the woman told them that Palscak purchased a clothes chest for another woman with $300 that she (Mrs. Palscak) had given him to get out of some serious difficulty.

After questioning her, detectives conducted her to the county jail on a charge of felonious assault and battery, where she will await the outcome of her husband's injuries.

Only 1,000 G. A. R. Vets Able to Parade

CINCINNATI, O., Aug. 27.—(AP.)—The time-strafed ranks of the Grand Army of the Republic, faltering but indomitable, swung into parade once more today.

Although wearied by advancing years, their steps lagging and backs bent, a thousand survivors of the union's army of '65 proudly insisted they would march the entire distance. Automobiles were assigned another 1,000, and it was estimated 500 more, too feeble even to ride, would stand by to wave greetings.

The parade down gaily and elaborately decorated streets was the climax of the 64th annual encampment of the G. A. R.

Precautions were taken to be in readiness to care for those upon whom the burden was too great. Red Cross and relief stations were established all along the route to care for those "falling by the wayside" from weariness or illness. Boy Scouts stood by to assist.

Aside from the parade, today was an important one otherwise. The schedule called for the sixty-fourth annual business session, devoted to hearing nominations for officers, invitations for next year's encampment and the annual reports of officers.

O'Malley, Edwards testified, said:

"You know me, I'm Thomas O'Malley."

Edwards said that he ordered O'Malley back into his machine which was parked near by and that O'Malley refused to go, saying:

"You can't arrest me. If you do, you'll not walk this beat any longer. You're not big enough to arrest me."

O'Malley is said to have then engaged in a fight with the officer. Taken to East End police station he posted $30 bail, but announced, police say, that he would not be present for a hearing.

A party on a houseboat at the foot of Galveston avenue ended last night with one man in the hospital and four others arrested on suspicious person charges.

John W. Voigt, 47, who gave his address as the houseboat, in Allegheny General Hospital, is expected to recover from an ax wound in the head.

Bertha Meryman, of East Lakeheart street, Joe Ward, 48, of the houseboat, William Miller, 48, of Gerst street, and Claude McKinley, 45, also of the houseboat, were taken in custody.

At a hearing this morning before Magistrate J. J. Sweeney, James Callaghan, the arresting officer, testified Voigt said Ward hit him with the ax when he refused to leave the boat. Police said the men quarreled over Miss Meryman.

All were discharged except Ward, who will be held until Voigt recovers.

The Body in the Basket

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

The body of a murdered man is found in a basket taken from a service truck of the Imperial Laundry. The driver has no conception how it got there. The only clue is a $20 gold piece found beside the body. A porter, janitor at the Deauville Court Apartments, Thomas Jackson, identifies the body in the basket as that of a tenant, Richard Wythe, a wealthy gambler.

Now Go On With the Story.

CHAPTER III

"When did you see Wythe alive the last time, Jackson?" Capt. Blake asked when they were once more on their way in the police car.

"Shortly after midnight last night. I was leaving the apartment and wanted to say good-bye to him—you know, he'd always been very kind to me. There was a game of some kind going on, but he came to the door and we chatted for a few moments. He said good-bye and wished me luck."

"You say there was a game of some kind going on. Just what kind of a game?"

"Gambling of some sort—he was a gambler, you know."

"Recognize any of the people in the game?"

"Some of them; yes, sir—mostly by sight. But Ralph Carroll was there. Mr. Carroll lives at the Deauville Court."

They were passing Seventy-second street when Robin Dale spoke for the first time.

"This might be the best spot to let Mr. Jackson off, Capt. Blake."

The captain knew Dale had some motive for making the suggestion, so the car was stopped and Jackson got out.

"Of course, you understand you'll have to stay in town until this is cleared up, Jackson," said Blake. "We'll let you know when we want you."

"Very well, sir," was all Jackson said. The car started leaving him on the corner.

"Turn here," said Dale almost immediately. Once around the corner he quickly suggested that the driver, whom Jackson had probably not paid any attention to, be put on the trail until relieved. It was quickly done, Jardin taking the wheel as they continued downtown to the Deauville Court.

Dale stopped first to question the man at the switchboard. He had been on duty the night before.

"What time did Jackson leave last night?"

"About 12:30. He came to say goodby and we talked for a few minutes." The attendant was surprised as the news had not yet been given out.

"Anything unusual happen at Mr. Wythe's apartment during the night?"

"Why—why, nothing that I know of, sir."

"Oh, we know about the games there; but anything else—sounds of any argument, or a fight, or anything like that?"

"No, nothing like that. There were some people there, but they all left about 3."

"Mr. Carroll with them?"

"Yes, sir; he was—he came to the door with them, and then took the elevator upstairs."

Dale turned to Capt. Blake. "Think we better have a chat with Carroll?"

"Wouldn't be at all surprised, Dale." Then he turned to Jardin. "Telephone the office and see if any news came in. Have one of the boys go and relieve Kinny, and keep someone on the Eighty-seventh street place all the time."

With that Blake and Dale went to the elevator and rode to the fourth floor. They rang the bell of Carroll's apartment and it was opened by a servant. Carroll, fortunately, was at home.

"We may as well tell you, Carroll, that Wythe was murdered!" said Capt. Blake bluntly.

"Murdered! Then it did . . ." Carroll stopped abruptly.

"Then what did?" Blake asked sharply.

"There was something about the game which might have led to this. I'll have to go to the beginning. We started to play about 10—there were Clayton Norris, Ernest Saunders, Burt Murdoch, Wythe and myself. It was a pretty stiff game. About 1 o'clock an argument arose between Murdoch and Wythe. Our host got the idea that Murdoch was not playing straight and did everything except accuse him of cheating. He suggested that there was only one end for anyone who cheated, meaning, I think, death.

"However, that blew over and at about 2 Wythe suddenly rose as if remembering something on the spur of the moment. He said he had a present to give for Christmas and that he would be back in a short time telling us to go ahead with the game. He was a pretty heavy winner at that time, so he pocketed the money and went out.

"We played for a while and then someone, I think it was Norris, went around to Wythe's seat and there, under the table, he found an ace cached—the ace of spades! It appears, therefore, that Wythe was the one who played crooked. Murdoch threatened to get Wythe for this and Norris, a young fellow who had acted very nervous all night, made some pretty nasty threats. We waited for Wythe to come back but when it got to be 3:30 we all left, believing that he probably did not intend to return. I imagine Wythe left so suddenly—that's the way it struck me at the time—that he forgot all about the card he had hidden."

"You say Wythe was winning. About how much?"

"Well, it was a pretty stiff game. I should say he was close to fifteen thousand ahead."

"That's a lot of money to carry around. You say Wythe took it with him?"

"It was mostly big bills—the stakes were high. There was also one stack of gold, mostly $20 pieces."

The thing was getting somewhere now. Capt. Blake passed a glance to Dale upon the mention of the gold.

"We know Murdoch," said Blake. Murdoch was a well-known plunger along Broadway and on the fringe of the underworld. "Tell us about Saunders and Norris."

"Saunders is sort of a hanger-on with Wythe's crowd—you probably know who they are. Norris is a young fellow, someone Wythe invited into the game. He lives on the West Side somewhere—he gave me his address if you want it. I think he was a novice at this sort of thing. Norris was the one who brought the gold pieces into the game."

Jardin came in at the moment with the news that someone who knew Wythe was under arrest at police headquarters.

"Name is Norris, Clayton Norris, arrested today for stealing over $50,000 from the bank he worked at."

(To Be Continued Tomorrow)

"WHAT TIME DID JACKSON LEAVE LAST NIGHT?" ASKED DALE — "ABOUT TWELVE THIRTY"

CANADA RAISES PRODUCE DUTY

OTTAWA, Aug. 27.—(AP.)—A set of new values for duties on certain United States produce was announced by E. B. Ryckman, minister of national revenue, in order to prevent dumping in Canada.

The per-pound values follow. Apples, 6 cents; cabbages, 5 cents; cantaloupes, 13 cents; celery, 10 cents; onions, 4 cents; peaches, 12 cents; pears, 9 cents; plums and prunes, 8 cents; tomatoes, 10 cents.

The government action fixes a definite value upon which the duty provided in the customs tariff may be based. In the case of apples, for instance, the rates are: Free under the British preference, 15 per cent intermediate and 20 per cent general tariff. There is, however, a provision that the duty at no time shall be less than three-fifths of a cent a pound under the general tariff.

BUS LINE BROKE, 25 STRANDED

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Aug. 27.—(AP.)—Twenty-five persons, including several women and two babies, are stranded here and some have gone without food for two days as the result of a bus line owner allegedly absconding with fares paid him by the party which had left Los Angeles nine days ago for Chicago and New York.

Their plight was discovered in Municipal Court, where three drivers were exonerated of operating a bus without a permit. Court action was brought by members of the party in an effort to hold the drivers until they could obtain a refund of fares from B. C. Elliott of Los Angeles, owner of the National Stage Line. Elliott, the court was told, left the party in El Paso.

The party was due in Chicago Friday, but a series of mishaps to the bus delayed the trip, causing the passengers to use their funds for food and lodging. Many said they had loaned money to the drivers for gas, oil and bus repairs.

The stranded are being cared for by citizens until funds can be raised to send them to their destinations. In the group is Fred Duncan, of 152 Vivian street, Akron, O.

TRUE STORIES of CONSTRUCTIVE BANKING—No. 8

Instead—SHE KEPT HER MONEY IN THE FARMERS!

HER Farmers Savings Account, opened in 1912, had grown to more than $5,000.00 in 1926 through small, regular deposits. On a vacation trip to New England she was strongly urged to buy a roadside refreshment stand. Persuasive salesmen claimed the stand would pay her several thousand dollars a year profit. She wrote, asking our opinion of the proposed investment.

An investigation disclosed that the information furnished to her was incorrect. Due to several reasons the stand could not be expected to make money and, furthermore, the salesmen were totally unreliable. One, indeed, was wanted by New York police authorities.

The facts were presented to our depositor. Her account remained intact, the usual regular deposits continued and today she has a balance of more than $5,000, built entirely by depositing part of each week's pay.

Programs of this sort are popular because of their implied intrigue mixed with romance. "East of Cairo" is the NBC's affinity to "Arabesque." Columbia's best bet.

Dedie to the tune of "Deep Night" we take it the NBC will broadcast what takes place in Soldiers Field, Chicago when the best athletes in the world get together to settle track and field disputes. KDKA is the station at 10:30.

If you like Edwin Franko Goldman—and who doesn't—tune WJAS at 8 to hear Jo Tyler play his most popular composition "On the Mall."

And you might be surprised Goldman is one of the Sacred Song sponsor's favorite composers. She never misses his stadium concerts in Gotham.

May we recommend the Palmolive Hour on WCAE at 9:30 with Oliver Palmer singing the "Bird Song" from "Pagliacci," a duet of "Meet Me Tonight in Dreamland" Elizabeth Lennox in del Riego's "Homing" and "Pomp and Circumstance" by the orchestra?

CURTAIN

Being back stage comes natural to Virginia Harmon, the petite radio soprano who makes her debut at the Pitt next week in Reknowned Virginia has long been a favorite of many actors and actresses visiting this city and is about as well known among the local histrionic fraternity as Dick Powell. She was invited to join one of the larger New York shows a few years ago but mamma said no. Since then she's been a hit on the radio. Folks will remember her superb acting in the Song Story at WCAE. She sings well acts naturally . . . and is a rare

SALUTE WELL DONE

Have you ever heard a network program better done than the Westinghouse Salute over KDKA last night? It was fine. In the audience outside the studio was H. P. Davis, vice president "Father of Radio Broadcasting" who saw radio in its most perfect stage. We suppose it did his heart good to see what an efficient staff he has at KDKA. Dwight Myer, plant manager, handled the "memo" work to the one-hundredth of a second. Boys on the production end did superbly . . . and when it comes to narrating it's hard to surpass Fred Rodgers.

QUESTION A DAY

Blotzky Ring Duquesne. What are the names of the other actors with Phil Cook?

A—Phil has no assistants. He acts all parts himself. He has imitated 21 different characters and has played as high as seven roles in one radio production. He's good and were it not for the tremendous popularity of Amos 'n' Andy we think he'd be talked about a lot more.

NEVILLE COKE

CLEAN
Smokeless
Economical

INSTEAD of smoking and spraying the neighborhood with soot, the old furnace, with the use of NEVILLE COKE, will bring a saving in health, in cleaning and housekeeping, and in money.

Ordinarily, 25% of coal is lost in smoke and gas. NEVILLE COKE has eliminated practically all smoke-producing qualities. Three tons of NEVILLE COKE should produce as much heat and last as long as five tons of good quality soft coal. It ignites quickly, burns evenly and is clean and easy to handle. You do not need new furnace equipment to burn NEVILLE COKE.

NEVILLE COKE Time Signals are given every hour throughout the day over Station KDKA. Listen for Grandfather Neville's sayings at 9 A. M., 12 Noon and 6 P. M.

Ask your dealer about Summer prices, or telephone ATlantic 2290. An interesting folder, "Are You Living in a Chimney?" will be sent on request.

17 Distinguished Women Sit in Unique Council

Mrs. James J. Davis, Mary Roberts Rinehart, Anne Morgan, among members of committee to view spectacular tests of new soap discovery

THE story of a remarkable new achievement of science—startling in its significance to millions of American women—was revealed recently in news reports of what is claimed to be the most unusual meeting of its kind ever held. Seventeen distinguished women—called together by a prominent manufacturer—to witness a pre-showing of a commercial product.

Ritz Hotel scene of meeting

The meeting was called to order by Mrs. James J. Davis, wife of the Secretary of Labor, as scientists presented to this Committee of 17 of America's most distinguished women the results of tests conducted over a period of two years for the purpose of finding a new and satisfactory method of washing fine fabrics.

Tests tell dramatic story

First chemists pointed out how modern hasty washbowl laundering of silks demands an utterly different kind of soap than chips or flakes. How they set out to make a soap that would dissolve instantly . . . rinse away 100% and cleanse in water cool enough to be safe for silks. How they finally solved this problem by making a soap of olive and palm oils . . . in the form of tiny, hollow, instant-dissolving "beads."

Then the tests of the new soap began.

Thirty times faster than old ways

Mammoth test tubes, flooded with light, revealed relentlessly how the new soap dissolves 30 times faster than the thinnest chip or flake! Rinses away 100% in one swift rinse!

Used in water barely lukewarm, it cleansed at new low temperatures never usable before—safe for the most fragile fabrics.

So revolutionary was the new soap, so perfectly did it fulfill requirements no soap has ever been able to meet before, that the Committee of 17 went on record as "unanimously approving this as soap ideal for washing silks."

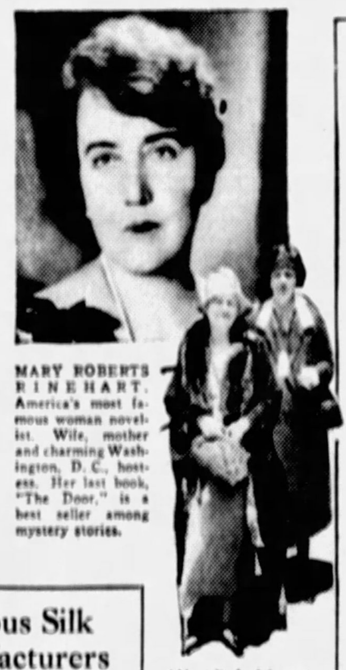
Called Palmolive Beads

Because this new soap is as gentle and protective for delicate fabrics as Palmolive is for the complexion, it has been given the treasured name Palmolive Beads.

Palmolive Beads protect fine things

Test these tiny, hollow beads yourself against ordinary flakes or chips. Try Palmolive Beads for washing delicate silks in your own home. Wash delicate colors, fine woolens, lovely chiffon hosiery in the gentle, protective suds of Palmolive Beads again and again. Then note how much fresher, firmer, newer, lovely fabrics look.

Palmolive Beads are for sale everywhere. They cost but 10 cents a box. No more than you have been paying for ordinary soaps.



MARY ROBERTS RINEHART. America's most famous woman novelist. Wife, mother and charming Washington, D. C., hostess. Her last book, "The Door," is a best seller among mystery stories.

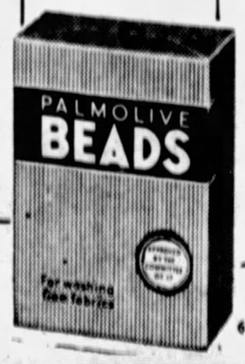
(Above) Arriving at the meeting that made soap history, Mrs. Oliver Harriman and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Famous Silk Manufacturers

unite with Committee of 17 in endorsing Palmolive Beads

Cheney — Luxite
Corticelli — Phoenix
Holeproof — Stehli
Kayser — Vanity Fair
Van Raalte

The above manufacturers analyzed Palmolive Beads in their own laboratories. They tested them again and again in washing tests on the silks which they manufacture. And now all of them recommend Palmolive Beads for safe washing of silks.



Who's Who on the Committee of 17

These famous women — leaders representing every phase of feminine activity, from all over the United States — approved and sponsor Palmolive Beads.

The Loudspeaker

Comedians Fall Down, College Songs Alike. | One Busy Industry, Many Jazz Maestros.

By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—The inability of stage comedians to be funny on the air continues to be a matter of great curiosity to me.

Louis Reid

I have heard the expression "d a m n" but once on the radio. I have never heard the expression "hell" on the loudspeakers. The industry and ingenuity of song writers in paying tribute to "baby" is a matter of never-ending wonder to me. Organ music, save when it is concerned with the rhythms of the tango, invariably puts me in a restful mood.

I would rather listen to Tschaikowsky's Sixth Symphony than all the "keynote" speeches ever delivered. I have yet to break my vow never to tune into a bedtime story. It has ever been difficult for me to resist a homicidal impulse whenever I hear the expression, "Heigh ho, Everybody."

I have about given up hope of ever hearing George Bernard Shaw on the air. I have not given up hope of sometime hearing the Honorable J. Thomas Heflin. Mrs. Hoover is the fastest talker I ever heard on the radio. No broadcasts, to my mind, possess so much potential drama and excitement as those of heavyweight prize fights. I am ever grateful to jazz for having definitely put a stop to the banal ballads of the Roosevelt era.

The tunesmiths of the world have always done their best, it seems to me, when setting down the glories of roses and rivers. My feet and fingers are ever set to tapping by the English country dances of Percy Grainger. Nevin's "Narcissus" invariably fills me with a wistful recollection of a vanished youth. I consider Tschaikowsky the peer of all composers in the ability of blend gaiety and sadness. Judging from the photographs which I have seen, the beautiful women in radio can be counted on two hands.

College Songs Sound Alike

The similarity of college songs has ever been a curious phenomenon to me. I have never had a desire to learn the words of "Huggable, Kissable You." I once heard "Singing in the Rain" sung 10 times in two hours. I would rather hear Al Jolson sob "Sonny Boy" than Chaliapin stifle a tear for the Volga Boatman. I have heard the "Rhapsody in Blue" played on every instrument but the zither. Of all the classics that are jazzed I reserve the major part of my applause for the works of Chaminade.

Though "Carry Me Back to Old Virginny" figures more frequently in the repertoires of concert vocalists, I am unable to detect its superiority to "My Old Kentucky Home." I am ever at a loss to understand why broadcasting stations do not erect memorials to Victor Herbert and Sir Arthur Sullivan. Were I to be sent to my couch with a lingering illness I would ask my man to set the dials to the comforting voice of Walter Damrosch. I consider Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Scheherezade" the most intoxicating Oriental music ever written.

It is my belief that the people of the republic are more aware of politics than at any time in their history due chiefly to the long and diverting radio battle between Hoover and Smith. I can't remember ever having heard a solo on the bassoon. I wish I could forget all the solos I have heard on the cornet. I am invariably entertained by the waltzes of Johann Strauss. I am invariably set to yawning by the compositions of Giuseppi Verdi. "The Funeral March of a Marionette" will ever be a more cheering thing to me than "The Birth of the Blues."

No Idleness in Megaphone Mills

Were Hoover's statisticians to extend their exhaustive economic surveys they would find, in my opinion, the least unemployment in those factories which make megaphones for radio crooners. I have yet to hear Lizst's "Liebestraum" that I did not detect a faraway look in the eyes of the charmers. I never hear Nevin's "Venetian Love Song" that I do not set out upon a fruitless quest of the golden girl. I once heard the expression "Hello, folks," voiced with the blend of an English accent and a Virginia drawl. It was from the lips of Lady Astor.

No composer, to my mind, is in a class with Jerome Kern in turning out light music of an unusually tinkly character. I would rather hear John Charles Thomas sing "Duna" than all the quartets this side of Marconi's yacht warble their way through "Mandalay." I have been able to resist any temptation to master the musical saw. I have often wished that a national election could be held every year so that I might hear the vitriolic eloquence of Senator Glass and ex-Senator Reed.

I would walk a mile to hear a bagpipe band play "The Campbells Are Coming." I would walk two miles to hear a drum corps play "Dixie." Were I called upon to name the outstanding musical program of the past year I would choose the first concert of the Philadelphia Orchestra under the eloquent stick of Stokowski. I have often speculated why the Intermezzo from "Cavalleria Rusticana," favorite of the street pianos, is so seldom heard on the loudspeakers.

No Hall Big Enough For Jazz Convention

It has become a matter of increasing doubt to me if Madison Square Garden is large enough to hold a convention of all the jazz maestros on the microphones. I am ever stimulated by the hope that the voice of Wilhelm of Amerongen will some day reach my armchair.

WALTER WINCHELL -:- On Broadway

Query

I might as well make up my mind we're through,
I danced—and there's the fiddler now to pay;
Don't think, my dear, that I am blaming you,
Too long you overlooked each cogitant way.

It seems to me that everyone in town
Has told me of the lad that's in my place,
And though you did just right to let me down,
The music isn't very sweet to face.

Remember how I'd do some foolish thing?
I'd come and lay my troubles in your arms—
Half-girl, half-mother, cool and comforting
You'd laugh away my sinister alarms.

My foolish ways will never stop, I fear—
And who will ease their burden, now, my dear?

—Don Wahn.

SOUNDS LIKE HIM

Prince the star laugh maker and main mystery boy. His stutter in talking is what makes his comments all the more amusing.

He was being interviewed in a talkie scene the other day and had great difficulty with the word Encyclopedia. He kept forcing them to make re-takes because he couldn't complete the syllable long-hand. Finally had to stop after the fourth syllable.

"Hols smokes," thundered the director, "can't you say Ency-clo-pedia?"

"Oh my," cried Prince, "don't add any more words to it."

REPARTEE

Phil M. Daly avers he overheard Bert Wheeler and Bob Woolsey swap this chatter. Ever since she got married, chirped Wheeler, she's been dating.

His son? queried Bob.

STEW STUFF

Jean Harlow, the ever-filling star of Hell's Angels, brought this one back from Hollywood. One of those uniformed restaurant doormen who takes his 500 seriously was approached by a client.

As relax whispered the client, old boy. You're wasting your time working for this joint. I'll buy you a book and you can go into business for yourself.

HE'S STARTIN' IN AGAIN HUH?

Accordingly I hired a boat. The boat had a name of its own but our party took one look at its prow, paint, color and promptly named it Winchell.

He doesn't act like a stew trying to collect at a banquet, Mona Hewitt, in the Daily Mirror.

Look, look. He doesn't know how to spell lamp post.

AS IF WE DIDN'T KNOW

Take it from Willard Robinson, women are not such dopes. They may spend $5 cents or $25 on a hat but they do not pay a quarter every night to get in free.

NEWSPAPERMAN STUFF

Hitherto whose dramatic reviews and other writings still treasure began his career as a locomotive engineer. Percy Hammond was a press agent and one of the less important editors started as a song-and-dance man. But what we started out to chronicle was how Burns Mantle, now a New York official of the plays, was made a dramatic critic.

Mantle served the Denver Post as a columnist ever so many seasons ago. One day the rag's critic F. W. W. who prepared his stuff in an unintelligible long-hand scrawl turned in his review on a new show. The entire composing staff begged off. I can't make out his handwriting, they all declared.

Mantle agreed to set it. The next morning the regular critic complained to the editor that the only line used was the first line. The rest of it, he groaned, was written to someone else.

The editor investigated. Mantle confessed that he wrote the review just as he set type and because it was a well-done affair he signed it F. W. W.

AND THEY HANG PICTURES

Too much is written about the broken love life of Broadway's writers. Mr. Peter Arno of Gotham Life (the double-crossing friends etc. One seldom hears about the successful . . . only the failures.

Because one presumes the bulletin outnumber the also-rans.

CASTING HIS FIRST STONE

The Granville Ohio Times interviewed Mr. Rudy Vallee the other afternoon. Mr. Vallee passed time rehearsing his lines. The Granville interviewer says among other things he especially admires Walter Winchell.

Well the Maestro certainly has a darn good reason.

MY PAL CAL

Several columns ago it was recorded here how our radio comments concerning Calvin Coolidge's actions had been misinterpreted. We pointed out in explanation that we had defended the articles from the charge that a ghost-writer prepared them, and that instead we had praised the writings.

And that we had been quoted by his local newspaper—the quote being "Coolidge packs more wallop in 200 words than some of us do in 200 columns."

Comes this letter from London and R. H. Waldo the president of the McClure Syndicate. Dear Walter Winchell—Your amusing note on the misunderstanding of your comment concerning Calvin Coolidge's articles reached here Monday (Sunday for the record). I am reminded that I neglected telling you the good original comment of the 200 words versus 200 columns which liked better by the gentleman most closely concerned than any other that we know of his having sent."

You take Vallee. I'll have some Coolidge.

Surcharge Fought By School Board

WAYNESBURG, Aug. 27.—An appeal from the auditor's report of Jefferson Township has been taken by members of the Township School Board who were surcharged $860.33 because of alleged excessive salaries paid to the board treasurer, R. I. Sealy.

In their appeal the board members declared their reputations were damaged by a charge made by the auditors that an illegal agreement existed among the board members to rotate the job of treasurer in order to collect a salary, which usually was in excess of $1,000.

"WHAT'S the use of pretending to be what you are not? After all, there's an important place in the world for regular gasolines—so why trick yourself out with a false face and try to pose as a special motor fuel?"

"Orange American Gas doesn't do anything like that. Orange American Gas is proud of itself—proud of the fact that it's a regular gasoline selling at regular gas price—and giving the best possible performance available at that price."

"Of course, if you want special motor fuel performance, you must pay a slightly higher price in the beginning to get it. And if you want the very best performance, and the lowest cost per mile, you want AMOCO-GAS, the Original Special Motor Fuel."

The American Oil Company makes two distinctly different products—

ORANGE AMERICAN GAS—a regular gasoline selling at regular gas price.

AMOCO-GAS—a special motor fuel, sold at a premium and worth it!

If initial cost determines the price you pay and you want the best possible performance at no increase in price, buy the NEW Orange American Gas.

If low cost per mile is your yardstick and you want the best motor performance buy AMOCO-GAS.

Whichever you choose you are assured of an excellent value, the best that the market affords.

Raquel Is Thrilled When Boat Reaches France

CHAPTER XXXVII

There was much merrymaking on the Gloire de France that evening. The music had never seemed so lively, the dancers so frolicsome, camaraderie so spontaneous.

An undercurrent of anticipation throbbed through the giant ship. Ahead there, in the night, was France. Tomorrow these people would scatter like a lake into the banks of which outlets are cut leaving its waters free to seek whatever course is their level.

"Many of them I'll never see again," Raquel told herself with a little tinge of regret. Perhaps none of them.

Yet here they had been herded together, a little world to themselves, scudding along through blue-green water. Crossing their wires of ambition, of love of hate of passion, as if they might be going on this way to the end of time.

Greta had told her that one does not wear formal dress the last evening on ship. So she had chosen a frock to suit her mood. A frock built of scarlet and silk and buoyant youth. A frock that laughed and revelled in motion, that settled into soft folds and tried to look sedate in repose.

But there was little repose in Raquel this night. She was like a scarlet poppy romping with a high wind.

"Shall we stroll a while on deck?" Alphonse asked her when they had finished a particularly seductive waltz.

"I'd love it," she agreed at once.

"Then I will bring your wrap."

"Oh, no. Don't bother. It's warm. I like the wind from the sea."

Alphonse Glad

"I know, ma petite. But it is treacherous, that wind. You have been dancing. It is not safe."

He went to fetch the wrap. She wished he would be less solicitous. Less proprietary. She felt that she was the best judge of what she should do.

He put the wrap around her shoulders. His hands lingered. His long, tapering fingers touched her cheek, then drew away quickly as if they had strayed on forbidden treasure.

"Thanks," she said. Her voice was a chill breeze.

They walked forward, stood out where they could feel the wind pressing velvet palms against hot cheeks. Raquel forgot the lingering arms, the touch that had chilled her. There was nothing but the allure of the night. And the stars, so close overhead that it seemed she could reach up and pluck them to make a twinkling wreath for her hair.

The long, tapering fingers on her arm brought her head out of the stars. She recoiled imperceptibly.

"Tomorrow," she said, wishing to make conversation, "we will be in Paris."

"And I for one shall not be sorry," said Alphonse. "The life on shipboard has no interest for me. It is too compressing. All these people, they are polyglot. Like the French potage, or peasant soup. Everything is thrown into it. The result is bound to be uncertain."

Speak of Love

"There are a few interesting ones—Mrs. Dexter—and Bertie Adams." The last name slipped from her unintentionally. She should not have mentioned it, after the unpleasantness in her room.

The fingers on her arm tightened.

"You like this young Adams?" Alphonse asked, suspiciously.

Raquel's white teenth were bared. They caught at her under-lip. It was more than vexation that prompted her to make a curt answer.

This man by whom she was employed, for whom she made money, meant to grind his heel into her if he could. He thought to fashion her to his will. To take control, not only of her time, but of her interests. He must be made to know otherwise. Now, in the beginning. She must curb her temper, though, or she would lose the conflict.

"I suppose you might call it that—liking," she said, easily. "I admire his type. He's young, clean and strong. And he's fine, too, when he's himself. When he lets go, like he did the night he got into our rooms. I can feel nothing but pity for him."

Alphonse winced at the word "young."

"Pity is akin to love," he said, sardonically.

"We'll leave love out of it. I do not know love."

"You will learn."

"No. I shall not. Now or ever."

Alphonse laughed. The laugh of a man who has seen drama change to lightest comedy and back again. So long as the little Raquel's heart was empty, it could be filled. Beauty, luxury, fine clothes, fine foods, rare jewels, strange places, sparkle, splendor. LIFE—they would fill it. He must create in her an appetite for these things. The insatiable appetite.

Values Freedom

"You must not be angry with me, ma petite," he said, ingratiatingly. "I think only of your good. Great things await you in Paris. I do not want them spoiled by a silly affair of the heart. The young scamp Adams is a waster."

All men are when they dare to be," said Raquel. "Only some selfish desire, some goal they hope to gain for themselves, keeps them from throwing themselves headlong."

"In that you are wrong, ma cherie." He spoke as a father to an impatient child. "But we will not discuss it on this so delightful evening. I feel a responsibility for you, my child. I shall expect you not to make my role of adviser too difficult."

"I shall sincerely try to please you in all things, Monsieur," she said earnestly, "so long as you do not ask of me my freedom. I have braved many things. I have hurt those who loved me"—laughing Jack Farrell—"those I loved"—Lucy and baby Jose—"for freedom. I will not give it up after paying so high a price."

"It would be the last sacrifice I should ask you to make," said Alphonse suavely.

This slip of a girl was a woman. A clever woman and a determined one. Something had disillusioned, embittered her. He had once experimented with dry ice. She was like that. Burning cold. Dry ice melted. In time.

Raquel awoke before dawn. Voices were shouting outside the port-holes of her cabin. There were thumpings and rumblings.

She jumped out of bed, confused. What was this strange feeling? As if the world stood still. She could hear her own heart beat. She rushed to the nearest port-hole.

France Reached

The ship had stopped. Below on dry land, men were rushing back and forth. Their voices set up a bedlam of unfamiliar noises—words she did not catch.

Then it all came over her with a tingling little rush. They were shouting in French. This was France. She was in France.

Now she made out other figures on the deck. Could those two over by what looked like a table or a counter be——why yes! Greta and Bertie Adams. She could just make them out. Had she overslept? Were passengers going ashore? Why hadn't Greta called her? She rushed to look at the clock in the gray room. Two in the morning. They were not to land until eight. She rang for the steward.

"What is it?" she asked excitedly. "Am I late? There are people outside."

"Non, Mademoiselle," the steward assured her, with his knowing smile. "They go ashore for carnival. They will return."

Raquel returned to the port-hole, hung perilously out. She wanted to be there with Greta and Bertie Adams, making carnival, too. She was on the point of summoning Alphonse to beg him to take her where her feet might touch alien soil, if only for a moment.

No. Not Alphonse. She must assume no intimacy with him if she was to keep him at a distance, as she meant to do.

She looked up at the sky.

A lambent moon swung, like a lazy blood-orange lantern, over the treetops beyond the water's edge.

Women Resent a Beauty's Tactics, Never Her Loveliness, Says Fay King

YOU HAVE SO MANY ADMIRERS — WHY CAN'T YOU LET MY BOY FRIEND ALONE?
IT'S THE FACT THAT SHE IS MAKING SUCH A FOOL OF HIM THAT HURTS ME MOST!
FAY-TING

By FAY KING

When other girls are bitter toward a beautiful girl it is not because they resent her beauty but because they resent her tactics.

There are some pretty girls so aware of and confident of their attractiveness that they seem to take a fiendish delight in fascinating every man they meet just for the momentary triumph it gives them.

But fortunately there are many other beautiful girls who would never do this.

They know how easily men are won to beauty, but what an unfair advantage they would be taking and how it would hurt his own girl.

Women are just as enthusiastic as men in their admiration of a really beautiful girl—especially, if she is FAIR in more ways than one.

Love's Reawakening

Continuation of Love's Awakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Lillian's Anxiety to Reach Savarin Home Prevents Stop

You'd pass the Burnt Tools with flying colors, Uncle Harry," Mary said with a giggle when Mr. Underwood told her that the question she wished to ask was: "When do we eat?"

You can open the tin lunch boxes and fish out the sandwiches any minute you like," he told her. "But remember the biggest red apple goes to Teacher now in the driver's seat, and you will cut it into small pieces for him so that he may take bites as he drives with one hand."

"Why mention that last fact?" Mary shot back saucily. "I never saw you use two, and I'm perfectly sure you could drive with your ear or your left big toe if necessary."

"Thanks for the dandelion greens, little Mary," he told her, "but please expend the well-known energy in unpacking the eats instead of generating heated air. We need the one and the motor is furnishing enough of the other."

"Apparently there are other empty little Mary's in the car," Dickie's niece gibed. "But just watch the original if you want to see service. I'm considering an offer from the Pullman diners right now."

I heard the clink of silver and in another minute Mary touched me on the shoulder.

"Please take this, Auntie Madge," she said, and I turned to see her holding out a cup of hot soup from the container concerning which Katie had given us such voluble directions. "You can feed it to the driver, spoonful at a time, if he wants it that way. But if he desires to quaff it down, you'd better stir it vigorously for a second or two. Otherwise he won't be able to talk for a week and we'd all die of ennui."

"When this journey's ended you'd better make tracks for the nearest woods, young woman," Mr. Underwood advised. "Otherwise you're going to get one of the paddling which must have been absent from your youthful education. Of all the impudent minxes! How about the soup, Lady Fair?—is it cool enough?"

"It will be in another second or two," I answered, stirring the steaming mixture vigorously. Then both stirring and speech ceased abruptly as we heard Lillian's voice raised in protest.

"No, Mary, please don't ask me. I couldn't taste anything."

Lillian's husband slowed down the car.

"I'm so sorry," he said. "I might have known you couldn't eat or drink with the car moving. We'll just stay here until we've had a bite. Please hand me my soup, Lady Fair. You'll have it churned into butter if you stir it much more."

He turned back to me and I handed him the cup with a mental salute to the adroitness of his attack. He had issued no ultimatum calculated to rouse his wife's spirit or obstinacy, but underneath the velvet glove of his apparently courteous action and words there was the unspoken dictum, "We do not continue our journey until you have eaten something."

"Harry!" Lillian's voice was sharper than I ever had heard it. "You know it isn't the movement of the car. I could manage an eight-course dinner on a racing-car if I had to. I'm simply not a bit hungry. But if you'll go on at once, I'll take a cup of soup, another of coffee, one roll and a bit of the chicken. Will you let me off the rest?"

"That depends, old dear," he said, "upon what you mean by a 'bit of the chicken.' If it's under five hundred—what d'ye call 'em—calories? I may have to stop again."

"I'll do the measuring for you, Mr. Underwood," Mary promised, with a laugh. "Here, Auntie Madge, is your soup. The fish course will follow immediately, but you mustn't hurry the butler."

"I haven't any intention of doing anything save hang a medal around the butler's neck," I told her, and indeed she proved her natural efficiency most royally in the minutes following as she served the appetizing viands Katie had provided in a fashion most convenient for our eating. But when we had finished and she was repacking the baskets with the comment that we had enough left for a Christmas dinner, I realized that Mary and I were the only ones who had done any justice to Katie's lunch. Lillian had eaten what she had promised, but no morsel more, and while her big husband had made a tombastic pretense of enthusiastic eating he had drifted thrown out of the window most of the food Mary had prepared for him—an action which I knew was not suspected by either of the occupants of the rear seat but which I could not help seeing.

It was twilight by the time Mary had packed up the lunch again and when we stopped for gas, 40 miles below Kingston, the pitch darkness of the winter night was enveloping us.

Better telephone those people where you're planning to stay all night Lady Fair," Mr. Underwood advised in a manner that was the epitome of casualness. But I thought I detected a note in his voice akin to the little, quickly stifled exclamation which Lillian had given upon hearing his proposal, and knew that in both their minds was the query whirling through mine.

What news of Robert Savarin would be ours as the result of that telephone call?

Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Brushing the eyebrows with a stiff little brush, solid for that purpose, will train wild hairs to behave themselves and to stay within the fold. Dip the brush in brilliantine which will pick up any particles of powder that the eyebrows may have caught during the face calcimining process.

Discontent not only produces an unpleasant facial expression, but it causes tissues to lose tone. It has a bad effect upon the digestion, and the body does not make repairs properly. All cloudy emotions take elasticity from the skin, throw the physical machine out of kilter and wreck the house of beauty. Cheerfulness has much to do with health and good looks.

The Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND.

You Can't Please the Men

Life would be simpler, sweeter and easier for women if men would only decide definitely what they want a woman to BE.

When a woman used to "faint" or "vanote" on the slightest provocation and kept them running for the smelling salts, they complained that she got on their nerves.

Now that she swallows her emotions and keeps a stiff upper lip they complain that she is "hard-boiled," cold, unsympathetic and unappealing.

If super-emotionalism and childish dumbness bored them, the modern girl should be a great relief to the male sex.

In the old days a woman was always doing something to startle a man, just in order to attract his attention and keep his love from going into a state of coma.

The girl of today may not be so "appealing"—but she is infinitely more interesting and more reasonable. She has discovered that emotions in a woman are always either a nuisance or a bore to a man. And that is the hardest lesson that woman ever had to learn.

* * *

She may not have the soft, clinging coquettish little ways that caught a man's heart and wound themselves around it; but neither has she the stranglehold around his neck that sometimes choked the heart out of him.

* * *

She never flatters his masterfulness or appeals to his protective instinct by weeping on his coat lapel—but neither does she steep him in tears and send his love to a watery grave.

She seldom sobs, swoons, blushes or shudders. She is always as cool and sweet as ice cream. Her temperamentalism has been extracted with her tonsils, and her sensitiveness and emotionalism have been banted off with her hips.

* * *

And, while that may make her less "feminine," it should please the men, who spent their days coddling, petting and waiting on the old-fashioned woman—and their nights wondering why God made her so inconsistent.

If she was sentimental and sensitive, it bored them to tears. If she was jealous, it drove them into some other woman's arms. If she was depressed and down-hearted, it drove them out to the club—or to drink.

If she was excited and jubilant, they called it "hysteria," and if she was indignant or aggrieved or impatient, they called it "nagging."

CORRECT MANNERS

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

The Sequence of Serving Guests at Table

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Is it correct to put your chair back in place when leaving the table, especially in restaurants or cafes?

2. Is it correct to serve an elderly lady first (who is a member or our family) before your guests who are younger? If there is an elderly man present, does this rule apply also?

3. Is it proper to introduce a lady to a gentleman when he has a title, such as D.D.S.?

S. H.

1. This readjustment of the chair is not necessary.

2. I am sure that, as one of the co-hostesses of the home, the elderly lady who is one of your family would prefer to have the guests served first. However, if the guests are very young, you would use your judgment about this sequence, and serve first the one whom it would seem most appropriate to serve first. In other words, this is a relative matter, and would need settlement each time it arose; and the settlement of the question would depend on the relative ages of the guests.

3. No. The lady is presented to the gentleman in only a few cases, and those occasions do not usually arise in the lives of most of us—when she is presented to the President of the United States, to kings and other reigning monarchs, and to cardinals of the church.

Gifts to the Employer

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it correct for a girl working in an office to give her employer a Christmas gift? I never thought it just the thing to do, but I know a girl who did this last Christmas. Please help me get this matter straightened out. S.

This is not good form. It never fails to seem forced and unnecessary—lacking in sure taste.

Household Hints

Try cooking the carrots with their skins on. They have an appreciably different flavor and a much better one, cooked that way.

To keep gravy from being lumpy—and there's no worse fault in a gravy—add a pinch of salt to the flour used for thickening before mixing with water.

To remove brown stains from baking dishes, let them stand over night in a rather strong solution of borax and water. I think you'll find that an effective remedy.

TELL IT TO SALLY

By SALLY MARTIN

Shouldn't You Marry the Man You Love, or Don't You Believe in Love?

Is Love all hooey?

Freda wanted to know—quick! For Freda had her Hope Chest filled and the date set 'n everything. When suddenly, in an ill-fated moment, she read an article by a famous writer whamming romance and saying how it is practically fatal to marry a man you love.

So poor little Freda wailed—"Is it true, Sally? If it is, my heart is just broken!"

And we promptly told her it was a lot of Eye Wash— and advised her to bet her last heart throb on the grand old game.

Whereat, Dave crashes into us like an oil truck.

"Love!" he snorts fiercely. "Yeah! It's tremendous, all right! A tremendous joke!" And what's the reason for all this venom? Well, a couple of ladies failed to appreciate him.

Tune in on his static while I pick me a nice tender tomato.

"My Dear Miss Martin:

"This outburst is prompted by reading your answer to Freda in tonight's paper.

"Just how much truth is there in the remark that "love is a lot of hooey?" Well, take it from me! There's a lot of truth in it! I have just lately discovered that there is no such thing as love. The thing they dignify by that cognomen is a monstrous joke. And the strange fact is that the so-called "fair sex" is the ringleader in destroying it. And regardless of how much romancing, idealizing and sentimentalizing we do, we can't escape the fact that "love" is but another name for plain animal appetite. "A rose by any other name," etc.

"I, too, was once 'terribly confused' on this subject. Finally, I decided that love was the most beautiful thing that could enter anyone's life. The inspiration for all the good things that happened, and a host of other silly fancies. It is no such thing. But it took two misadventures to prove it to me. Fortunately, neither of them reached the point of matrimony.

"In spite of all we may say about the 'sanctity of womanhood,' the 'woman on a pedestal' and such stuff, it is quite evident that it is the woman who contrives to destroy all these beautiful ideals. A woman will hand you a dirty deal every time. And about the second time I got my finger burned, I decided to let them strictly alone. They are totally unacquainted with justice. They are totally ignorant of the first principles of honor.

"And right here let me correct a misapprehension. I am not a middle-aged man, past the marriageable state. I am still quite young. Twenty-two in fact. Financially, I am fairly well fixed. Morally, I am better than 99.44 per cent of the girls.

"Women are selfish and self-centered. No one of them is capable of a love that will overcome all obstacles and inspire a man to do the fine things of which he has dreamed. No woman helped me get where I am today. No woman inspired me to work and raise myself to the financial, social and mental status that I have achieved. In view of these facts, why should some gin-swigging, ciggie-smoking wench share them with me?

"All this, boiled down, means that to women love is an unknown thing. Or merely something to toy with and smash when it suits them. I firmly believe this to be an indication of subnormal intelligence, moral inferiority and general debility of the senses. Smoking is now prevalent among them. Drinking has become commonplace. And moral looseness is the natural result of these things. So I say to Freda, 'Don't marry. You'll do the young man a favor not too. He won't realize it or admit it—now. But some day he'll thank his guiding star that he was lucky enough to escape the folly of youth.'

JUST DAVID."

So that's what you think of women and love, is it? G'wan, ya big cry-baby! Who're you trying to kid? Me? Or yourself? What'sa Big Idea, anyway, of deciding that life's a washout and love a delusion, just because somebody busted your kite? G'wan, 'n' grow up!

Certainly women aren't saints. Nobody ever said they were. Women, like men, are only human. Good and bad, all scrambled together. But this world is filled with women who have loved deeply and bravely—and who have made terrible sacrifices for that love. But they didn't usually make them for spoil babies. They made them for men they could respect—man of dignity and discipline, tolerance and humor — men who could meet life head-on without whining.

Love wasn't a "joke" to those men and women. It was the greatest and most profitable adventure in life—although it cost them many a heartache. They gained greatly from love because they gave.

And one more word before I quit. You say no woman helped you to your present position. Don't forget, Big Boy, that one woman risked her life to put you in your present position. You're bellowing all over the lot because a couple of mighty wise girls turned you down. But she went through hell with a smile to take a chance on you. And, from present indications, I should say the poor old girl bet on a two-spot.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Children Needn't Fear Undulant Fever

Some time ago I told you of a little known disease called "tularemia." Recently I have had letters telling of the appearance of the disease and asking for information.

DR. COPELAND

First the symptoms and later the germs of tularemia were discovered in the ground squirrel about 20 years ago. Not long after that cases of infection of humans were reported.

Of this disease the rabbit is the chief carrier with which man comes in contact. Wounds made while cleaning diseased rabbits may become infected. Fortunately comparatively few rabbits have the disease.

The germ of tularemia is carried by the deerfly and the woodtick, and may be transmitted to man through the bites of these pests. If you are spending time outdoors in communities where tularemia is known to exist, all bites should be carefully watched.

In handling rabbits the infectious material may be carried to the eye. When this happens it may cause "conjunctivitis," an inflammation of the lining membrane of the eyelids and the covering of the eyeball.

Usually the trouble begins with a papule or pimple of the skin. This develops near a wound which becomes infected while cleaning a rabbit. It may appear at the point of the bite made by a woodtick or a deerfly.

From two days to a week passes before the wound becomes very sore. By this time chills and fever have developed. There is also aching throughout the body, with loss of weight, prostration, and sometimes delirium.

The acute stage of the illness lasts from two to four weeks. During this time the site of the original wound ulcerates. The nearby glands become swollen and may even suppurate. There is considerable fever.

Following the attack there is slow recovery. The period of convalescence may cover from two months to six months, or even longer.

The percentage of deaths from this disease is small. Happily there seem to be no lasting ill effects.

Science will find a way to protect against tularemia. In the meantime, should there be cases in your neighborhood you must take unusual pains to disinfect any wound you may get under suspicious circumstances.

Big Families Not the Rule Among Stellar Lights In Hollywood

By HARRISON CARROLL.

(Copyright, 1930, by Premier Syndicate.)

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 27.

Big families are not the rule among the stellar lights of Hollywood.

I can think of only four stars, all men, who have as many as three children. They are Victor McLaglen, who has two boys and a girl; Charles King, who has two daughters and a son; Clive Brook, who has three (I'm not sure how they're divided); and Will Rogers, who has two boys and a girl.

A great many more have two children. John Barrymore, for instance, has two girls; Joe E. Brown, 2 boys; Amos, of "Amos n' Andy," 2; John Boles, 2 girls; Milton Sills, a daughter and a young son; Lawrence Tibbett, twin sons; Charles Bickford, a son and a daughter; Charles Chaplin, 2 sons and Buster Keaton, 2 boys.

Nancy Carroll

The feminine stars usually have but one child. There come to mind Gloria Swanson, a daughter; Nancy Carroll, a daughter; Ann Harding, a daughter, and Winnie Lightner, a son.

George Bancroft has a daughter; Walter Huston, a grown son; Skeets Gallagher, an infant son; Noah Beery, a son; El Brendel, a son; Jack Gilbert, a daughter; Jean Hersholt, a son; Bert Wheeler, a daughter; Richard Barthelmess, a daughter; James Gleason, a son; Conrad Nagel, a daughter; Douglas Fairbanks, a son; and Harold Lloyd, a daughter.

Do you know that Polly Moran has an adopted son, 12 years old?

HOW TIME FLEW

On excellent authority, I hear that the Marquis Henry de La Falaise, "Hank" to the film colony, was still at a quiet farewell party when his train pulled out for the East. Some hotel porter had given him the wrong time. Since he had only a few hours to catch his boat in New York, he is said to have chartered an airplane to pursue the train. This was a fitting climax to "Hank's" visit, which simply dripped with drama from start to finish.

KIND OF CHARITY

Several wealthy families, whose estates are much sought-after as film locations, have given the Assistance League in Hollywood the sole right to rent their property. The proceeds are donated to the charity fund of this organization, which maintains, among other things, a day nursery for the children of the film extras.

The upstairs dining room maintained by the league is very popular among the film people. Famous stars donate their services as waitresses. The other day at lunch, I saw Sally Blane and Carmen Pantages serving table. Right smartly they did it, too.

ANOTHER ENGLISHMAN

All the cast will be English in Ronald Colman's new picture, which is also written by an Englishman, Frederick Lonsdale.

Ronald Colman

Today, Samuel Goldwyn signed Phillip Strange to play Ronald's brother in the story. Strange appeared in one other Colman picture, "The Rescue."

There is still no official announcement as to who will play the feminine lead, but the part is being rehearsed by Constance Cummings, the stage actress, who is a recent arrival in Hollywood.

VETERAN TEAM

The team of Charles Murray and George Sidney are the Weber and Fields of the films.

For five and a half years they have been making pictures together at a half dozen different studios.

They started with "For the Love of Mike." Then followed "McFadden Flats," "The Cohens and Kellys" series and other films. The latest picture featuring the two will be "The Cohens and Kellys in Africa." Universal will make it.

SCORES HURT AT LAUNCHING

HAVRE, France, Aug. 27.—(AP.)—The 600-foot torpedo boat Vautour slipped on the ways during its launching here today and in a wild stampede to get out of its way many persons in the large crowd witnessing the christening ceremonies were injured.

The 2,480-ton ship, one of the finest units in the new French fleet, slid about 200 feet down the ways. Suddenly it swung about as if on a pivot when two-thirds of the hull had hit the water.

The bow of the Vautour remained in the cradle, high in the air.

Intense excitement spread throughout the crowd, which dashed in all directions. Scores were bruised but officials said none had been seriously injured.

"NEW KONJOLA IS WONDERFUL" SAYS THIS MAN

Farmer Happy to Praise New and Different Medicine for Good It Did Him.

Results are what count, and Konjola can be counted on for results in ills of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, and for rheumatism, neuritis and nervousness.

MR. S. G. SEALS.

This is easily explained, for all of Konjola's 32 ingredients work together in attacking at their very source the ills Konjola is designed to relieve. See what this amazing medicine did for Mr. S. G. Seals, South View, near Pittsburgh. Then talk it over with the Konjola Man at the Dow drug store, Penn avenue and Sixth street, Pittsburgh, Pa. But right now read the words of Mr. Seals, who said to the Konjola Man:

"I suffered for three or four years from stomach, liver and kidney weakness. Constipation bothered me; I had sharp pains across the back and frequent bladder action disturbed my sleep. I bloated after meals, became short of breath and was nauseated. Bilious attacks and headaches were frequent, because of a torpid liver. But since I have taken Konjola I have an excellent appetite and am gaining in weight and energy. The pains are better and I do not have to get up at night. My liver is functioning correctly, and headaches and bilious attacks are no more. Konjola is wonderful; my faith in it has no limit."

So it goes; the same splendid story of relief when Konjola is put to the test.

The Konjola Man is at the Down drug store, Penn avenue and Sixth street, Pittsburgh, Pa., where daily he is telling the story of this remarkable medicine. Konjola is sold also in all Dow stores in Pittsburgh and vicinity.

CHOICE OF TOWN HALL SITE HELD UP

SIDE WALKS of PITTSBURGH

by WILLIAM DFARR

Two inveterate fisherman are Squire Hernon, of Sharpsburg and W. A. Morton, of Carnegie Institute, although their lines do not cross. Eleven months in the year the squire sits at his desk; the twelfth month he hurries to Lake Killarney in Canada and fishes and fishes and fishes. To prove his talents he sends long black bass to his friends in Pittsburgh, the better, possibly, to prepare them for the stories he'll tell when he returns. The point is, the squire preserves his reputation as a fisherman by producing his catch.

On the other hand, Ralph Munn, director of the Carnegie Library, feels that the reputation of his friend, Mr. Morton, as a fisherman has been fairly exploded. Mr. Morton's favorite fish are in a lake in a small Michigan village, to which he migrates annually. And annually he returns with reports of nine, ten and eleven pounders nibbling his bait. Mr. Morton, mind you, is a truthful man, but his friends have felt that—well—

This year in the Michigan village the townspeople were excited by the birth of a child to one of the prominent wives.

Immediately a committee rapped on Mr. Morton's cottage and asked to borrow his fish scales so that the new citizen might be weighed. The baby, on the scales on which Mr. Morton gullibly tested his lake victims, weighed 32 pounds.

"Katy" Easterday used to cut up quite a bit when he was a football star at Pitt a dozen years ago.

One night Easterday interrupted a poker game in a fraternity house near the campus to borrow three dollars from a student whose name was Max. Easterday explained that he was broke and had an important engagement with a fair young woman. Max protested that he, too, had a similar engagement with Miss Soandso, the apple of the campus eye, but Easterday rode down his complaints. Katy then hurried to a telephone, called the apple and said:

"Max had to go home because his aunt is suffering from diphtheria, and he asked me to take you to a movie."

And Easterday so arranged things that when Max left the fraternity house to meet the one girl, he saw her parading past the house leaning on the willing arm of the deceiver who owed him three regretted dollars.

Like peanut golf on land, motorboting on Pittsburgh's rivers has enjoyed a remarkably successful season. That veteran river man, I. C. Price, reports that ordinary canoes and skiffs are being deserted for the motor product just as one-hoss shays were abandoned for the auto. Motor-boating is not a precarious sport, but a motor-boater is made to feel it is. A motor-boater swishes his boat suddenly in the water and is whirled about in mad fashion. This produces a state of mild intoxication without the hangover. Sunday, if you stroll along any of the rivers, you may see motor-boaters shooting by at 45 miles an hour. Frequently they race each other.

Yachting, too, has its admirers, but on a large scale it is an expensive fad. Harry Snavely, the restaurateur, once sailed to Florida in his yacht.

To those who are attracted neither by motorboats or yachts, there is surf-board riding. On the South Side there is already one club for surf-boarders. Among the eminent surf-boarders are Frank Malloy, Earl Beckett, Al Phillips and Pat O'Brien. They have reached the stage where they do tricks as their boards skim over the water.

WESTERNERS INSTITUTE SPEAKERS

Milwaukee and Michigan Educators Address County Teachers at Two Sessions

Dr. Frank Baker, president of the State Teachers' College, Milwaukee, Wis., gave three addresses today in Memorial Hall during the third session of the Allegheny County Teachers' Institute.

His talks dealt with modern schools and adventuring in education. His last talk of the day was on "The Ever-Changing High School."

Other speakers were Dr. Paul P. Voelkler, president of Battle Creek College, Michigan; Dr. S. C. Schmucker, of West Chester, Pa., and Miss Lena Bixler, of Temple University, Philadelphia. The subjects presented by Miss Bixler dealt with young children's problems.

Talks on specific problems of education occupied yesterday's program, with politics, natural science, history and current affairs alternating to claim the attention of the several thousand teachers attending the conference.

Speakers tomorrow will include Edmund Vance Cooke and former United States Senator Thomas P. Gore.

WRECK DRIVER HELD, GIRL DIES

After Hill district police had arrested James Mack, 22, of 10 Roberts street, this morning as the driver of an automobile wrecked yesterday morning in Second avenue near Glenwood bridge, Daisy Richards, 15, of 1406 Fifth avenue, injured in the wreck, died in Mercy Hospital. The girl had suffered a skull fracture.

At the time of the accident police arrested Joseph E. Duffy, 24, of 912 North Lincoln avenue, as the driver. Later occupants of the car are said to have told police that Mack was driving when the accident occurred.

John Kantra, 40, of 259 Chartiers avenue, McKees Rocks, is being held at the Center avenue police station, charged with operating his automobile while under the influence of liquor. Police claim his automobile struck and injured E. J. Anderson, 34, a Negro of 377 Wilkinsburg avenue, in the Boulevard of the Allies at Stevenson street. Anderson is in Mercy Hospital, suffering from cuts and bruises. Dr. Matthew Ashinsky pronounced Kantra under the influence of liquor.

HELD IN DIVING SCHOOL FAKE

Because of his offer to teach young men deep sea diving, Harold Hansen, 29, of 703 Copeland street, was being held for a hearing today in the Central Police Court, detectives reported.

Hansen was arrested at Penn avenue and Ninth street, when several young men who said they paid him $30 for the course complained they not only could not find Hansen, but could not even find the offices he was supposed to have in a downtown building.

The training was to take place in the local rivers with government jobs along the coast in the future, Hansen was said to have promised the applicants. Their duties then would consist of salvaging sunken vessels.

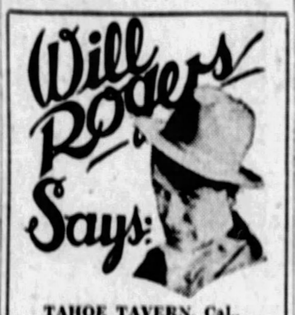
Scott Township, which originally included Dormont and Mt. Lebanon, has a population of 7,000.



TAHOE TAVERN, Cal., Aug. 27.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

I don't know who you are, or where you are, but go to the Chicago air show. I sure wish I could make it. It keeps getting bigger and bigger every year. It will be the one event in America that everybody will want to see. An automobile show is like a checker game in comparison. Think of seeing all our finest aviators doing stunts in one show. And it will always be the one show you can go to and not have your view obstructed by a broad-shouldered policeman. They can successfully keep you from seeing a prize fight, a ball game and all parades, but they can't keep you from watching an aviator. Yours,

WILL.

Who's Who Lists 300 Here; Politicians Fare Poorly

Who's who in Pittsburgh?

Among your fellow citizens who have arrived at various stages along the road to fame and greatness, how many can you name off-hand?

There are more than 300 Pittsburghers outstanding in the community and in national affairs, according to the 1930-31 edition of "Who's Who in America," which has just been published, but the chances are that your off-hand list would not tally with the names in the big red book of the great and the near-great.

Of the three county commissioners, E. V. Babcock is the only one who made the grade. Joseph G. Armstrong, chairman of the commissioners' board, a former mayor and a recognized political leader, is not mentioned. Mayor Charles H. Kline got by, but of the nine members of Pittsburgh council, Clifford B. Connelley and Robert Garland are the only ones who scored in "Who's Who." Certain folk may feel piqued when they see a fullsome biographical sketch of Paddy Sullivan, and note that Pat O'Malley has been ignored.

Of course the method of grading the country's notables is explained by the editors of "Who's Who" and in the instance of Sullivan it is to be pointed out that he, being a member of Congress, scored over O'Malley. Radio announcers apparently have not been heard in all sections, for Milton J. Cross and Graham McNamee are not listed. And Amos 'n' Andy, (Gosden and Correll) probably the best known comedians in America, are out.

Who's who sometimes must be who's what.

Tears Wash Away Cathie's Dream of Romance

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Catherine Paige, elder daughter in a fatherless home, secures her first position in the office of Alfred A. Farnsworth, successful engineer. In the office she meets Gordon Moore, and is instantly attracted to him, and he to her. He easily persuades her to spend the rest of the day "celebrating" her securing a position with Farnsworth, and his securing a contract for an important engineering project. At the end of an innocent and delightful day of lunching and sightseeing with him, Cathie finds herself deposited at her door and nonchalantly bidden goodby.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER III.

She rushed down the narrow cement walk, brushing past the calla lillies and geraniums, brushing a shoulder against the unyielding wooden gate that separated the front garden from the weeds and clotheslines and garbage cans of "the back yard."

The loose white china knob of the back door turned uselessly under her fingers. The packages began to slip, one by one, under her arms. She pressed her body tight against the door to hold them, and sobbed uncontrollably when the little paper bag of magic-nuts went slithering down to the ground. Somehow it seemed such a tragedy that she couldn't open the door and get in.

At last the knob caught, and the door opened, and she could run and fling herself, still hatted and coated upon the wide, lumpy bed in the back bedroom, and give herself up to the luxury of a good cry.

"Sap!" she told herself furiously. "Sap! Crying over nothing. What do you care? What's he to you? Nothing! Nothing at all! And you've got a grand job, haven't you? And you've had a wonderful day, and had lunch at the Mark Hopkins . . . Isn't that enough for you? What do you want anyway? Did you expect him to drop on one knee in the taxicab and propose to you? Is that it? Can't you have a good time for one day without bawling your eyes out because that's the end of it? What a fine sport you turned out to be, Cathie Page! What do you want, the moon? What do you suppose a man like that wants with a nobody like you? His friends would laugh at him . . . they'd make fun of you . . . snub you . . . Oh, stop crying! Stop crying . . . haven't you any sense at all?"

And finally she stopped crying and just lay there, red-eyed and weary. Not caring for her wrinkling blouse, for her sister's mussed suit, not really listening for the sound of her mother's key in the lock, not caring that she'd come right out to the bedroom and find her crying . . . not caring for anything except that Gordon Moore was gone.

Makes Dinner

Meal Ready When Family Arrives

But after a while she got up and washed her tear-streaked face under the cold water faucet, and hung up Ruth's suit and put on a starched, faded blue smock she found in the closet.

The potatoes and string beans were bubbling on the back of the stove and the hamburger was beginning to hiss in its pan when the family—the two sisters and one brother and the mother that Cathie had told Moore about—arrived.

Mary, the mother, came first. Came with her arms full of bundles, panting a little, her broad, tranquil face stamped with fatigue.

"Oh, ma! You've been out working again!" Cathie cried reproachfully, rushing to take the bundles, quick to notice the mussy brown paper, one that she knew contained a rolled up apron and an old, soft pair of shoes.

Mother Works

Does Shopping on Way Home

Ever since she had been old enough to know anything at all, Cathie had known what that hard little roll with the crumpled paper wrapping meant. It meant that ma had been out working by the day. It meant a fierce, protesting love for ma, and a kind of secret, writhing shame—not that you're really ashamed of honest work . . . poor ma did the only thing she knew how when she was left with four babies and hardly enough to pay for the funeral and the lot in Holy Cross . . . but you hated it just the same.

Mrs. Paige dropped into a kitchen chair and let Cathie take her old black hat and coat. "It's the heat," she said, brushing the damp hair off her forehead. "The heat that gets me. It's hot for April. Mrs. Ternan's kitchen is on the south side, it gets all the sun. I was doing up her ironing while she ran down to the sales. So on the way home I stopped myself. I got Eddie two real good shirts, he had to have them. One is a kind of pink color. I hope he don't think it's sissified—you know how he is—but it was a regular two-fifty value, so I . . . Open the package, Cathie, and look. I don't know as I'll be able to take it back on account of it being a special. And then I stopped at the Palace Delicatessen and got some ham for the children's lunch and . . . look out for the little carton, that's a few olives. Don't let the brine drip on that other one. That's stockings. They looked very good and only a dollar. So I got one for you and one for Ruth. Maybe I should have bought her two. I didn't make a very good job picking up the run on her other good pair. I got gunmetal for you, but if you'd rather have sun-tan I can change them. Now say so if you want, it won't be the least bit of trouble!"

Good News

Cathie Tells Mother About Job

Cathie's eyes filled. She poked at the sizzling hamburger. "You shouldn't have got any at all!" she mumbled, and then, remembering, she turned, her face all alight. "But that's the end of working! I got a job! Starting tomorrow! Twenty a week, and a chance for advancement—at Vaughan and Farnsworth—the biggest engineering firm in town!"

"Twenty a week and a chance for...well! That's fine, dearie. Come, kiss me again! I'm that proud of you! And twenty a week to start! Only this morning I said to Mrs. Hennessy, 'Any girl that can get a diploma from a business school in four months instead of eight,' I said, 'is smart enough to get a job, no matter how scarce they are,' I said, and 'what's more,' I said, ...ssh! I think that Ruth's on the steps. Put my things away quick! There's no need in her seeing—"

Cathie put the apron and old shoes in their regular hiding place, under some newspapers in a bin on the back porch. Ruth was excitable, and liked to think that her earnings as a school teacher at the Clifford Howe grammar school kept the family living well.

The cool air felt good. Cathie leaned against the screen door, letting it cool her flushed cheeks. Telling about the job had brought the other thing back . . . "I'll never see him again. Never, as long as I live," she whispered tragically, but she did not feel as bad as she had. If he had business with Vaughan and Farnsworth, and she worked for Vaughan and Farnsworth, wasn't it pretty likely that they'd meet again, after all?

"Cathie!" Ruth's shrill voice penetrated the closed door from Harold Dearden, 24, of 2818 Shadeland avenue, was arrested last night on a suspicious person charge by Patrolmen Joe Scanlon and Art Jennings, who say they found him in an automobile that had been stolen from Samuel Spaich, of Cleveland, about a week ago.

At the hearing this morning in North Side Police Court, Magistrate J. J. Sweeney ordered Dearden to pay $50 or spend 30 days in jail.

MORE ACTION DUE AFTER LABOR DAY

Commissioners Given Novel Ideas on Location; Nicola To State His Case Later

The county commissioners will meet some time after Labor Day for further action toward selection of a site for the Town Hall. They adjourned yesterday afternoon on motion of Commissioner Charles C. McGovern and will meet again at the call of Chairman Armstrong.

During the session yesterday the commissioners listened patiently while several advocates of proposed sites expounded their theories.

FAVORS DOWNTOWN

J. C. Chaplin, speaking in favor of a downtown location, said that any place in the Golden Triangle, or any adjacent site, would be preferable to any other location, even though it would cost more than $6,000,000 to erect the town hall.

One man advocated placing it in the Allegheny River on concrete piles, another wanted to double deck a street and put the hall four stories above the street level. Still another advocated building a hall near railroads so that full trains could be backed into the basement and unloaded of their passengers and freight, thus escaping bothersome traffic in the streets.

NORTH SIDE PLAN

F. J. Osterling, North Side architect, presented a plan for building the hall at the north end of the Ninth Street Bridge. This plan has the indorsement of the North Side Town Hall Committee. Asked if he had consulted Howard Heinz, owner of 49 per cent of the property on which he proposes erection of the building, Osterling told the commissioners he had not, but felt certain Heinz would approve the project.

Former Mayor William A. Magee, counsel for the Allegheny County Downtown Town Hall Association, did not appear at the meeting. This organization has been advocating several downtown sites for the hall. It was explained that Magee was out of town and will appear some time later before the board.

GERMAN FLIERS PRAISED

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN,
International News Service.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—Messages of congratulation and praise poured in today upon Capt. Wolfgang von Gronau and his three flying companions, felicitating them for their feat in successfully linking Germany and New York by air.

At the top of a great pile of such messages lying on the table in Von Gronau's hotel suite was an official communication from W. R. Castle, Jr., assistant secretary of state, containing the good wishes of the American government.

Before proceeding to the customs house, there to go through the formal routine of clearing his Dornier Wahl flying boat through official channels, Van Gronau wired Secretary Castle;

"For myself and compagions I thank you for your kind official and personal message. Please believe our joy in being here is your great country."

The trans-Atlantic quartet arrived here at least a day sooner than they were expected by officialdom. Consequently, the plans for a formal reception at City Hall were in a tangle.

Mayor James J. Walker had his list of appointments previously filled up and it appeared probable that instead of welcoming them today he would be forced to postpone the occasion until tomorrow or the next day.

Capt. Von Gronau is considering numerous requests to fly to Chicago for the 1930 national air races. But he pointed out that his flying boat, first used by Amundsen in the Arctic, carried motors designed for sub-Arctic travel.

The captain said, however, if he had time today he would look over his motors with a view to such a flight and decide about the trip.

Kusher was also badly hurt.

Henrietta Getz, of 217 Beltzhoover avenue, who was a guest in an automobile June 7 and hurt internally when she says the car collided with one of the Equitable Auto Company has sued the latter for $25.00 damages. The accident occurred at Milbridge street and Procter way.

Jane Gails, whose right leg was fractured when she says she was knocked down in Liberty avenue by an automobile owned by C. H. Becker, has sued the latter for $50,000 damages. The accident occurred April 6, 1930.

Two suits for $10,000 each were filed in Common Pleas Court by parents seeking damages for the death of their children in automobile accidents.

John J. Conroy and his wife, Ellen, of 714 Penn street, North Braddock, say that a machine owned by Andrew Fedor, Hawkins avenue, Braddock, ran over the curb July 6 and struck William Conroy, 8, while he was sitting on the steps of their home. Suit was entered against Fedor, who is accused of negligently operating the car.

Joseph Fritz and his wife, Hedwig, brought an action against the Yellow Taxicab Company for the death of their daughter, Marcella Fritz, 423 Ella street, August 31, 1929. She was struck by a car of the defendant company while crossing Hamilton avenue, near Dallas avenue, they charge.

LUCKY GIRL

the kitchen. "Cathie, aren't you going to help get dinner?"

Cathie came back to the kitchen dreamily. Ruth had a big blue apron on already, taking charge of everything as if she had strung the beans and done everything else herself. "Cathie hurry! Time to mash the potatoes!"

Not a word about the job, though ma told her all about it. Not a sign to show she was glad. It was just too much. Cathie couldn't bear it. "I guess I know enough to mash the potatoes. I do it every night, don't I?" she cried irritably.

"Well! If that's the way a job affects you! Wait until you've worked as long as I have, and there'll be no living with you. No. I'll set the table myself, Cathie. It always looks a sight when you do it. If ever there was a helpless young one you're it, and how long you'll keep that twenty a week job I don't know. . . . Now, what was I going to tell you? Oh, about Mr. Browning—"

Once started on the principal, Ruth rattled along until the other two came in. Fifteen-year-old Jean first. Easy to see she was going to be the beauty of the family, with her liquid brown eyes, and soft, curling dark hair. And after her came Eddie, the overgrown, gangly boy, fair and blue-eyed like Cathie, and barely a year younger.

At least they were impressed with Cathie's news. "Gee, I'll be glad when I get a break," Eddie, frankly envious, exclaimed, and little Jean sighed and said, "Now you'll have your own spending money. I know what I'd get if it was me—"

"If it were I!" from Ruth, the school teacher.

"If it were I . . . I'd buy a new red tie for my middle and—"

"Aw, quit hinting to Cathie already!"

"Edward Paige, I'm NOT hinting. I was only saying what I'd do if it was me!"

Cathie ate silently, picking at her dinner without much appetite, listening dreamily while the others talked. From a long distance she heard Jean's prattle . . . new dress, gym shoes, teacher says . . .

Eddie's adolescent rumble . . . Going out with the fellows . . . aw, ma, I'm not a baby! Gee whiz, living in a house full of women!

She ought to break in and tell them about Gordon Moore and lunch at the hotel. Ma would expect to know about a thing like that. She'd tell . . . after a while . . . after the dishes were done, maybe . . .

Eddie picked up his cap and shuffled out of the kitchen. Jean wandered away. The other three sat over their tea, drinking cup after cup from the squat brown teapot with the cup set in the top to replace the cover that had got broken, nobody remembered when.

"You'll be lucky if you get a man like Mr. Browning to work for," Ruth was saying.

Through the open window came the voice of Mrs. Hennesy from next door. "Cathie! Telephone! Yoo-hoo, Cathie! 'Phone!"

"The boy friend," Ruth murmured, with a little tightening of the lips, and a sly glance for her mother.

Cathie sprang up, blushing. "Oh!—Thanks, Mrs. Hennessy, I'll be right over!"

No, she couldn't. She just couldn't see Frank Prout tonight. Not after . . . after what happened today. A boy like Frank, after a man like Mr. Moore. You couldn't! . . . "Oh, Mrs. Hennessy! Wait! Tell him I can't see him tonight. I'm too tired . . . yes. I'll call him tomorrow. Oh, thanks, Mrs. Hennessy — thanks ever so much!"

"Well, of all things. Have you and the rising young druggist decided to part—after all these years? Anyway, we'll have one night without him under foot!"

"Ruth, if you don't stop picking on Frank Prout I'll—I'll go crazy! I'm sick of it. I'm so sick of his name I could scream!" Cathie's voice was trembling. She rushed to the sink with an armful of dirty dishes and banged them on the drainboard.

"There — don't plague her. She's tired, the poor child."

Cathie, choking back the angry tears, heard her mother's voice, and then a little gasp from her and Ruth. She turned, in time to see Jean standing in the doorway, a huge box of pale orchid moire in her hands. She had untied the ribbons and taken off the cover. Pounds of satiny black chocolates lay exposed to view.

"Cathie," she said in a small, awed voice, "Cathie, I found these on the bureau. Did your new boss give them to you?"

Recount Board Rules Out Fourth Ward Votes

The Camera Question Box

Today's question: — Did the San Francisco physicians who saved a man's life and permitted a woman to die when it was impossible to save both because but one respirator was available make the same decision as you would have made, or should the woman have been saved?

Miss Barry

MISS MARGARET BARRY, Pianist, East Liberty: — I think it was the only decision to make. The man was younger, married, and had a child, while the woman had no one but herself to think of.

W.J.McWhertor

W.J.McWHERTOR, Department manager, Brookline: — Yes I would have made that decision too. The fact that the man was younger was one of the things in his favor, and he had a family dependent on him for a living too.

Miss Bishop

MISS EMMA BISHOP, Clerk, City:—The decision in that case was the only sensible one that could have been made. I think it would be a wise move to get more respirators immediately, though, to prevent such a situation again.

George Yeckel

GEORGE YECKEL, Salesman, Brookside Farms:—I think that under the circumstances that decision was the right one. It would help more than one person that way, where saving the woman's life would have helped one.

Dr. Dranga

DR. AMELIA DRANGA, Pittsburgh:—I probably would have made the same decision myself—it was a wise one under the circumstances, but I think I should have shouted loudly for some sort of help before giving the woman up to death.

Miss Beebout

MISS FLORENCE BEEBOUT, Pianist, Squirrel Hill: — That decision was the only possible one. It was a question of saving the person who would be the most valuable if alive and of benefiting as great a number of persons as possible.

Tener Holds Idea Of 64 Rulers 'Asinine'

READING, Pa., Aug. 27. — (AP.) — Former Ambassador Gerard's idea that 64 men rule the United States is "asinine," former Gov. John K. Tener, of Charleroi, told the Pennsylvania Elks Association. Tener said:

AVELLA KILLER EVADES NET

Washington County authorities and state police today were continuing their search for Pietro Patrella, wanted in connection with the fatal shooting of two men at a Sacco-Vanzetti demonstration at Avella, Washington County.

The victims, George Harkoff and Stephen Mina, were buried yesterday from the Harkoff home, with a large procession of mourners marching behind the bodies to Avella Cemetery.

Bearing banners of the International Labor Defense, residents of the mining community filed past the open caskets in the cemetery. Speeches were delivered at the grave by leaders of the International and affiliated organizations. Both victims, authorities say, were leaders in the ranks of unemployed miners during the recent coal strike.

Mina and Harkoff were slain Friday night at the carnival grounds in Avella, where a demonstration was being held on the anniversary of the deaths of Sacco and Vanzetti. Mrs. Anna Harkoff, wife of the victim, was making a speech and is said to have been jeered by Patrella.

Mina and Harkoff remonstrated with Patrella, and Mina is said to have threatened him with a club. Patrella then, police say, drew a revolver and fatally wounded both men.

The search for Patrella has led into West Virginia mining communities where he formerly worked.

Betty was graduated from the Ethel Walker School. And she attended Vassar. Her fiance attended Groton School, and is a graduate of Yale, class of 1926.

New committees for the Lions Club of Pittsburgh were announced today at the final summer luncheon meeting in the Fort Pitt Hotel.

Chairmen of the new groups which will function with the opening of the fall season next Tuesday are: A. T. Weiblinger, luncheon committee; R. M. Sherrard, activities; W. A. Royston, Jr., blind; Dr. C. L. Reed, membership; J. S. Wallace, club extension; R. F. Hershey, finance; W. W. Jacob, attendance; E. A. Murdock, golf, and J. B. Meanor, convention.

Auto and Garage Destroyed by Fire

Glenwilliard and Leetsdale firemen were called out this morning to extinguish a fire in a garage at the foot of High street, Glenwilliard. The garage, a one-story frame structure, located on the property of the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie Railroad, was owned by Thomas Bessi. An automobile was destroyed. Firemen kept the blaze from spreading to a house a few feet away.

Parents Warned Of Melon Seed Peril

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 27.—(AP.)—Parents should take seeds from watermelon before giving it to children. The advice comes from Dr. Chevalier Jackson, professor of bronchoscopy, who has been treating a child with seeds in a lung.

Pittsburgher At Head of Exhibit

The safety exhibit at the annual convention of the State Federation of Pennsylvania Women in Scranton, October 13 to 17, will be of especial interest to Pittsburgh women. Mrs. D. Edwin Miller, of Pittsburgh, chairman of safety in the educational department of the Federation, will have charge of it. Incidentally, Mrs. Miller has just been appointed chairman of street and highway safety on the newly-created safety committee of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, which co-operates with the United States Bureau of Standards.

Part of the exhibit will be the same that was put on display at the Denver biennial of the General Federation by the Bureau of Standards. It shows a hospital room in miniature, the charts on the beds telling through what accidents the patients are there. Every room in a home is also reproduced in miniature with tiny figures showing safety measures and their opposites, together with their results.

The National Safety Council will also have an exhibit in charge of its educational division, its display consisting largely of program material. In addition there will be safety literature for distribution and the photographs submitted in the safety contest which the home safety division is now conducting, the awards for which are to be made at the convention.

LATEST MODE IN COATS PRESENTED BY STYLISTS

—Sketched in Paris—

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, AUG. 27.—Fashionables here are being fittingly coated for Fall. Everywhere one sees the influence of the princess silhouette upon coats of all types. This obtains not only in the more formal group of afternoon coats, but in town and country sports models as well. And in this connection it is interesting to note that while the coat of tweed or heavy wool retains all its former jaunty verve it also assumes an attitude of sartorial dignity that is a tribute to the Autumn mode. They are generally tailored to fit the waistline and mold the hips, with a slight flare evident at the hemline. This style of cut obviates the necessity of a belt and gives the garment a svelte attitude that is quite flattering to varied types of figures.

AN INTERESTING TYPE of tweed that is being used for the so called "knock-about" coat is a mixture of several contrasting colors. For instance a green of a fairly light hue may form the background which is flecked with various shades of green ranging from a yellowish tint to jade. Shawl collars of both long and short-haired furs are generally used to trim these interesting wool coats.

PATOU gives an example of how material may be handled to create a model characterized by simple impiecements and achieving the fitted lines. For this coat the designer uses a wool mixture of grey green and maroon with a beaver collar.

* * *

FORMAL WRAPS also show a tendency to adopt fitted waistlines, especially those of three-quarter or full length. Several collections recently have featured the wrap of uneven hemline, being considerably shorter in front than in back. Sometimes the back even dips into a graceful train. Vionnet's conception of the evening wrap beautiful is shown in the sketch today, the model bespeaking luxury in green velvet with a handsome black fox collar.

SPENT BIG SUM FOR HELEN KANE

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—(INS.)—Further testimony concerning the business affairs of the Bond Dress Company, interspersed with revelations of the stormy path of love followed by Helen Kane, "boop-a-doop" singer of the screen and stage, and Murray Posner, were scheduled today as the company's hearing in bankruptcy continued. Posner is a partner of the firm.

Posner yesterday denied most of the testimony of Miss Kane involving $50,000 which the dress company wants returned. Miss Kane said she gave the money to Posner to buy Liberty bonds, and that she did not borrow it from him.

Posner admitted paying her $50,000 from the firm's funds.

"I considered Miss Kane my closest friend," said Posner. "I loved her and I still do, I guess. We had every intention of getting married. She said she would help me out of my difficulties by lending me $100,000. She said she would never let me down. I returned to her all the money I had borrowed from her. But—she did not keep her promise."

Posner said he had spent large sums of money in gifts and entertaining the actress, sometimes $1,000 a day.

ANDREE BODIES' RETURN URGED

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 27.—(INS.)—Efforts were made today to have the fishing vessel Bratvaag, carrying the bodies and equipment of the ill-starred Andree polar expedition, return immediately to Norway.

Messages to that effect were radioed to the Bratvaag, which has receiving equipment but no sending facilities. Compliance would entail a loss since the fishing season extends until late in September.

Dr. G. Horn, leader of the expedition which stumbled upon the frozen remains of the 1897 Andree camp on White Island in the polar snowfields, transferred the bodies to the vessel for removal to Norway and Sweden but, it is believed, did not stipulate a direct return. Should the Bratvaag's captain determine to pursue his fishing activities little hope remains of receiving the bodies before the end of another month.

A waiting world is eager to scan the Andree diary. As leader of the balloon expedition, he recorded the adventures and experiences of his party.

SPORT COMMENT

Frisch at Another Goal. Makes His 2,000th Hit. Mack's Rash Chance.

Wilson Breaks Record. Horses Travel in Style. Oval Billiard Table.

CARD STAR ONLY EIGHTH OVER MARK

A GOAL THAT not every ball player succeeds in reaching before his major league career has run its course has just been attained by Frankie Frisch, of the St. Louis Cardinals.

Frankie Frisch

• The Fordham Flash has climbed to the 2,000 mark in base hits and entered a select set that includes only seven other players who still are active in the big show. Frisch now has a grand total of 2,003 safeties to his credit. He reached the line in a little less than 12 seasons and in a total of 1,542 games.

The Cardinal second sacker, of course, is not within baseball miles of the record for that phase of batting. The high mark for all major leagues is 4,191 hits, set by Ty Cobb during 24 years of service with the Detroit and Philadelphia Americans, while the National League peak is 3,430, reached by Honus Wagner in 21 seasons of playing with the Louisville and Pittsburgh clubs. The achievement of Frisch is a notable one, nevertheless, as players who amass 2,000 blows in a major league lifetime are the exceptions rather than the rule. A man must have uncommon durability as well as batting prowess to accomplish the feat.

THE ONLY OTHERS still in the majors who have made 2,000 hits are George Sisler with 2,798 up to date, Rogers Hornsby with 2,731, Harry Heilmann with 2,628, Sam Rice with 2,585, Rabbit Maranville with 2,177, Joe Judge with 2,150 and Babe Ruth with 2,128. Eddie Roush made 2,056 but dropped out this year. Old Cy Williams has collected 1,979 and therefore needs only 21 more, but may never reach the mark as he is being used only as a pinch-hitter and his return to the majors next season is doubtful.

Frisch went to bat 6,189 times in making his 2,003 hits, which gives him a grand batting average of .324 for his career up to date. He has made another unusual showing in scoring 1,113 runs, but here again he is far short of the records—2,244 by Cobb in the American and 1,740 by Wagner in the National. No other player has a chance to get his 2,000th hit this year. Nine have reached the 1,000 mark during the year—George Grantham, Paul Waner, Travis Jackson, Bill Terry, Freddie Lindstrom, Kiki Cuyler, Riggs Stephenson, Lou Gehrig and Sparky Adams. Barney Friberg is only five hits below that total.

IT LOOKED AS if Connie Mack were courting disaster yesterday when he sent George Earnshaw against the Senators in the third game of the series after losing the first two numbers. The A's needed that game for their peace of mind, if nothing else, and Earnshaw certainly did not look like the pitcher to get it.

In the first place he pitched five innings last Friday against the Tigers, and nine innings on Saturday against the same club, and sending him back against the Senators after only two days' rest was strongly suggestive of overwork.

George Earnshaw

ON TOP OF that, Earnshaw has been ineffective against Washington all season. Yesterday's game marked his sixth start against the Senators and it has been necessary to take him out before the finish every time. He has lost three games to them while beating them only once, and even in the game he won he failed to go the distance. That the A's took the final after Earnshaw had been knocked for five runs in the first inning saved Mack from paying the penalty of what looked like poor judgment, something of which he has not been accused very often during his brilliant managerial reign.

IF THE SENATORS had won that game and thus made it a clean sweep of three, their heads might have begun to fill up with pennant ideas again, as they would have been only five and a half games behind the Mackmen, the same distance that separates the Cubs and the Giants in the National League fight.

However, the defeat just about throttled any slim chance that may have remained. The A's could now lose the majority of their remaining games and yet win out unless Washington played close to .800 ball. If the Macks should win only 12 of the 25 games they have left to play, or a gait of but .480, the Senators would have to win 22 of their remaining 28 contests, or a clip of .786, to nose them out.

CLEARING THE LAST hurdle was a tough job, but Hack Wilson, Cub slugger, finally made it in his drive for a new National League home run record. His forty-fourth homer, registered at the expense of Larry French, Pirate southpaw, gave the West Virginian the distinction of having made more four-baggers in 1930 than any other player ever made in an entire season in the older of the major loops.

It took Wilson exactly one week to get the last round-tripper needed for a new record. The old mark of 43 was set last year by Chuck Klein, of the Phillies. Prior to that the league record was 42, established by Rogers Hornsby while with the Cards in 1922, and the highest total antedating Hornsby's performance was 27, credited to Ed Williamson, of Chicago, in 1884. The best mark between the records of Williamson and Hornsby was 25, registered by Buck Freeman, of Washington, in 1899. Wilson's 44 also puts him in a tie for the season's leadership of both leagues with Babe Ruth, who has not made a homer since August 17.

Hack Wilson

TWO PERSONS STILL declaring they were not surprised at Jim Dandy's stunning triumph over Gallant Fox and Whichone in the recent Travers Stakes at Saratoga are his owner Chaffee Earl, and his trainer, James B. McKee. They felt so sure of his success that they even went to unusual expense in sending him across the country from San Francisco. It is related that Jim Dandy and a stable mate, Naishapur, a 4-year-old that ran second to Clyde Van Dusen in 1929, made the trip to Saratoga in luxurious fashion that few horses have experienced. The average horse car provides for 12 horses, but this pair had a car to themselves, the compartments being taken down, extra padding put in, and other unusual precision being made for their comfort and safety.

ON TOP OF that, Trainer McKee insisted that the trip be made in as short a time as possible regardless of expense. So the Santa Fe Railroad Company was prevailed upon to attach the horse car to the California Limited, a crack flier from San Francisco to Chicago, for the first time.

These and other time-saving arrangements enabled Jim Dandy and Naishapur to make the journey from San Francisco in four hours less than four days, a savin, of about 18 hours. The shipping cost was $1,800 instead of only a little more than $200 in the ordinary way.

FOR MANY YEARS Charles C. Peterson, who has performed often in Pittsburgh, has specialized in doing freak stunts in billiards.

Armando Aquilla, of Chile, stopped Johnny Ciccone, of New York, in two minutes and 40 seconds of the second round of a scheduled eight-rounder.

WASHINGTON VICTOR

Washington, defending the Garry Herrmann trophy, emblematic of the International Printers Baseball League championship, and New York and Chicago, two of the leading contenders for the title won their second round games with ease yesterday, riding roughshod over the opposition. Washington swamped St. Paul, 22-to-3 at Magee Field. Chicago flashed its stuff at Forbes Field by defeating Cleveland 22 to 3, and New York, unleasing for the second day a barrage of base hits, beat Indianapolis 25 to 0.

Pittsburgh fought desperately to stay in the tourney and beat the St. Louis nine at Forbes Field, 14 to 9. It was the Mound City team's second defeat, so out it went.

Cincinnati lived to fight another day by stopping Boston 16 to 0 in a short game at Frick Park. Only Pittsburgh, Washington, New York, Detroit, Cincinnati, St. Paul, Chicago and Cleveland remain in the fight. The St. Louis, Boston and Indianapolis teams will watch.

At the conclusion of the Revolutionary War he became invested with the command of the entire United States Navy, as he was the highest ranking officer of the only vessel retained by the United States, and he had no superior officer in that branch of the service. CHICAGO, Aug. 27.—The Pirates will close their short invasion of Chicago this afternoon when they take on the pace-setting Cubs in a single game. But if they don't show more pepper and gumption than they displayed yesterday they are apt to be trimmed again by a team that is fighting for every inch.

The Waner boys tried hard to sink a wallop into the ribs of the Bruins yesterday, but other members of the club were far from the little stars' standard. The Waner Act went over in the fifth inning to put the Buccos out in front, but the Buccos collapsed a few minutes later. The home victory carried a 7-to-5 score.

BRAME TO HURL

Ervin Brame and Charlie Root are likely to fight it out on the mound this afternoon. Immediately after the game, the Buccos will hustle homeward to be ready to take on the Reds in a double-header tomorrow. Another dual bill with the Reds is on for Saturday, with a single game scheduled for Friday.

Hack Wilson today was being acclaimed as the new home run king of the National League. Hack the Whacker set a new record in the seventh inning yesterday when he drove one of Larry French's pitches into the right field bleachers for his forty-fourth circuit drive. Chuck Klein of the Phils last year made 43 homers.

Hack joshed with me about his anticipated record before the game commenced. When I talked with him at the batting cage during the batting session he yelled in effect:

"Get ready to give those Pittsburgh fans a story about that record homer," and then he laughed.

HACK SOCKS 44TH

Wilson's homer soared into the right field bleachers on a line, Paul Waner had a fine view of it.

Thrilling Plays in Local Typos' Series Win

RODGERS MEEHAN ALBRECHT

MEEHAN FINISHING HOME RUN JAUNT

Gene Meehan provided one of the game's biggest thrills as Pittsburgh defeated St. Louis, 14-9, in the printers' title tourney at Forbes Field yesterday. The local shortstop drove the ball to deep middle field. He is shown coming home "standing up" while Bill Rodgers, teammate awaiting his turn at the plate, and Albrecht, St. Louis catcher, look on.

N. SEDDON SHAPIRO

SEDDON OUT ON CLOSE PLAY AT THIRD

Although victorious over St. Louis in the championship battle, the Pittsburgh printers lost a close decision in the fourth inning when Norman Seddon, general utility performer, slid into third base in a cloud of dust only to be called out. The local star was on second base when Pittsburgh attempted a sacrifice. The play failed when Shapiro "put it on him" as he came in.

Only one game was on schedule for the American League yesterday and it finally brought the Philadelphia Athletics out of the difficulties which had beset them in the first two games of their series with Washington to a final 10 to 9 triumph which put them again in a fairly safe place, 7½ games in the lead.

The Senators, who had threatened to make it a real struggle for the pennant by taking two straight from the league leaders, failed to hold a five-run lead presented to them in the first inning. They remained out front until the eighth inning of a game which saw eight pitchers of the two teams yielded 31 hits.

WIN IN EIGHTH

In the eighth, home runs by Mickey Cochrane and Al Simmons tied the score and two walks, a single and two sacrifices brought in the winning run.

Chicago's baseball fans are about ready to look haughtily in the direction of New York and ask, "Who is this fellow Ruth?" for Hack Wilson, hefty home-run hitter of the Cubs, has a new National League record in the Ruthian specialty and has drawn up on even terms with the great Babe in this year's competition at belting four baggers.

Hack hit his forty-fourth home run of the season to put a finishing touch on the Cubs' 7 to 5 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates yesterday, and in doing it passed the record Chuck Klein set a year ago. It took Klein the full season to beat Rogers Hornsby's old mark of 42, while Wilson has beaten the young Philadelphian with 31 games to go.

CARDS BEAT REDS

The St. Louis Cardinals continued their advance in the only other National League game, defeating Cincinnati, 3 to 1, for their seventh successive victory. The Cards had a bit of trouble when the Reds put two men on base with none out in the ninth, but Wild Bill Hallahan, who had pitched a fine game, managed to get out of the hole.

The victory left St. Louis only a half game behind the third place Brooklyn Robins, with some prospects of improving their position as they continue against the Reds today, while Brooklyn tackles the Giants.

Chatterton Loses To Eddie Brannon

EAST LIVERPOOL, O., Aug. 27.—Eddie Brannon, 135, of Pittsburgh, outpointed Frankie Chatterton, 135, of Cleveland, in the 10-round main bout here last night.

Freddie Edwards, Chester, W. Va., 146, won over Tommy Ward, Pittsburgh, 143, in the six-round semi-final.

Kenny Davis, East Liverpool, 126, drew with Buck Morrison, Canton, 122, in six rounds.

SPRING PRACTICE.

There seems to be quite an organized movement against spring football practice in our colleges. I have made some investigation and I find that the objectors belong to one of five groups:

Knute Rockne

1. There are the football coaches who are in business on the outside, and coming back for spring practice at the school where they are being paid would seriously interfere with their business.

2. There are the football coaches who haven't a strong enough personality to keep any number of boys out for spring practice. Therefore, their spring practice is a fizzle.

3. There are a few track coaches, baseball coaches and basketball coaches who want spring football practice abolished. A few of them want it made compulsory for every student in school to come out for his particular sport.

4. There are certain psuedo-intelligentsia who are against anything successful. They suggest strolling "over hill and dale" or dancing on the greensward as compulsory forms of recreation.

5. Then come the managers of dance halls, owners of U-Drive-It garages, proprietors of speakeasies, etc., all of whom object to having their business curtailed because a large number of students are so busy in athletic sports in the afternoon that they haven't energy or time for any of these specialized extra curriculum activities.

At Notre Dame in the spring, after the track coach, baseball coach and tennis coach have taken every candidate with real talent in his sport, all the other students who wish may come out for spring football for six weeks. Just an hour and a half of play, healthful recreation in a wholesome environment and in a sport in which they are highly interested. Our physical education program calls for athletics for all. Why single out, and make an exception of, football?

Altoona Lad Cops Honors at Shoot

CAMP PERRY, O., Aug. 27.—(AP.)—Richard Heiler, 15, of Altoona, Pa., won the opening shoot of the national rifle and pistol matches here yesterday, winning the junior Class A prone event with a point score of 295 out of a possible 300. The match was for a trophy of the junior rifle corps of the National Rifle Association.

Competing with 45 boys and girls, from 15 to 18 years old, Heiler edged out Miss Phyllis Sargent, 16, of West Hartford, Conn., whose 300 shots made a score of 293. Milton Miller, 17, Columbus, O., was third with 292. Charles Andrews, 15, Canton, O., and James Butterworth, 16, Highland Park, Ill., tied for fourth with 290 points each.

Favorite Defeated In Trotting Race

WASHINGTON, Pa., Aug. 27.—Albert Wort, favorite in the 2:13 trot on yesterday's opening program of the Washington County Fair was defeated by Ima McGregor yesterday. The winner won the first and second heats, with Elizabeth capturing the third. Albert Worth was second in all three heats.

TARTANS OPEN GRID DRILLS TOMORROW

BY JESS CARVER.

Having combed the annual A. A. U. track and field championships out of our hair, with no ill after-effects save a slight feeling of bewilderment every time the memory of the three-mile walks pops up, the sportive spotlight turns in the direction of football.

It remains for Carnegie Tech to pry open the local collegiate training season by calling together tomorrow its huskies of the line for the opening drill of the year. Coach Robert Waddell will gather his linemen about him tomorrow morning and begin immediately to pound into their cocos the ideals of Carnegie football.

10 VETERANS BACK

The veteran contingent that will don uniforms on the morrow will be headed by Capt. Johnny Dreshar and will include Len Schnupp, Alex Ducanis, Pete Flanagan, Marvin Potts, Tom Hower, Johnny Highberger, Don Fletcher, Bert Pouncey, Howdy Stauffer and Ted Rosenzweig.

A crackerjack array of sophomores, holdovers from last year's champion freshmen squad, will bring joy and gladness to the hearts of Messrs. Waddell and Steffen. The new beef has been classified by Der Maxie Hannum, the astounding publicity gent, as follows:

Ends—Jacques Croissant, Merrick, Long Island, 188 pounds, and Tony Ostrosky, New Castle, 167 pounds.

Tackles—Frank Flizack, Palmton, Pa., 198 pounds; Albin Mysienski, Cleveland, O., 190 pounds; Jim Baushke, Benton Harbor, Mich., 188 pounds, and Kay Burns, Warren, Pa., 185 pounds.

Centers—Melvin Jones, Toledo, O., 183 pounds, and Alex Seigel, Pittsburgh, 175 pounds.

LIVE IN TENTS

Two sessions each day will take up the time of the boys beginning tomorrow. The backs will join forces with the linemen next Monday morning, at which time Advisory Coach Wally Steffen will discard his judge's robes and crawl into his old undershirt and pants and take a very prominent part in the directing of practice.

The footballers will live in tents this year, which have been pitched on the Tartan campus. What I'm waiting for is the first time the boys get kiddish and cut the ropes of the one Len Schnupp is sleeping in—sometime after any midnight.

The Tipoff

Select your own punctuation—

Wonder how Eddie Tunn and Georgie Simpson will finish in that "century" at Chicago tonight. Tunn better win or I lose five to Walter Berg. Is it possible? I'm too there is one thing the A. A. U. meet here did it made the Pitt dressing room smell natural again the boys won't feel strange when they get into it later on. Carl Shaffo says a three-mile walk may be in A. A. U. of your walking with a house they are running a chance holding that Britain-U. S. meet in Chicago at night Herman Brix is liable to throw the shot so far they'll never find it after dark they better have him turn yell.

Jack Elder, former Notre Dame sprint and football star, who finished up his career at South Bend last year, reports Purdue to have another great eleven this fall. So does everyone else.

Dr. John Watkin, line coach at Duquesne these days back in lettering at Marty Hogan's. He took his medical course at Vanderbilt, after pre-meding at Notre Dame.

They are thinking of leasing the steeplechase water jump, used in the A. A. U. meet at the Stadium, remain intact until the annual Police meet, a week from Saturday, and adding a steeplechase to the Coppers' program.

NEW FOEMAN SIGNED FOR RODGERS

By JAMES MILLER

Johnny Erickson, of New York, will square off against Jackie Rodgers in the main bout of the weekly ring show at Hickey Park, Millvale tomorrow night. Erickson will replace Benny Gershe, veteran left hook artist, of Cleveland as Jackie's opponent, Gershe having suffered an injury while training for the bout in Cleveland yesterday.

Another change in the card was necessitated when Eddie Barr, of the South Side, was dropped from the bill, and Sol Lippe, Philadelphia lightweight, was lined up as a substitute against Jackie Griffiths, Negro, of the Hill, in the third six-round bout.

Eddie Brannon, Negro, of the Hill, meets Billy (Muscle) Scholes of the North Side, in the eight-round semi-final. Mose Butch, of Oakland, and Billy Campbell, southpaw bantamweights, battle in the second bout, while Anastasio Vaquerio, of Panama, opens the show with Young Jackie Ruffner, of Kittanning.

Francis Flynn, who runs the weekly boxing show at the Moose Temple during the winter months, has completed his card for his first open-air show at the Twenty-seventh Ward A. C., California and Superior avenues, Bellevue, Friday night.

Jack Wilson, North Side middleweight, and Al (Red) Jaderberg, a Swede, out of Jamestown, N. Y., top off the double windup bill, with Jimmy Belmont, of Braddock, boxing Paul Oger, of Bellaire, O., in the other 10-rounder. Mickey Solomen, hard-hitting New Castle junior-middleweight, takes on Billy Brent, Negro, of the Hill, in the second six and Frankie Lands, of Youngstown, meeting Tony Anderson, Hill district Negro, fighting his first pro bout, in the opening bout.

Tickets for the show can be had at Flynn's office, adjoining the fight arena.

Between Rounds

Buck McTiernan, clever and hard-punching junior-middleweight, of Swissvale, who battered Joe Dundee, the former welterweight champion, around the ring at the Meyers Bowl several weeks ago, only to have the judges call the bout a draw, will be brought back to the Meyers' field emporium next Tuesday night to face Clyde Hull, of Texas, in the 10-round main bout. Hull is the fighter who had Pete Latzo on the floor when the latter was welterweight champion. Just recently Hull scored a win over Jack Malone, St. Paul's veteran, but smart welterweight. Among some of the prominent boys Hull has beaten are Tommy Freeman, Canada Lee, Latzo, and has knocked out Johnny Indrusano, Irish

Gems to Honor New Manager Tomorrow

FAIRMONT, W. Va., Aug. 27.—(AP.)—Directors of the Fairmont club of the Mid-Atlantic League have declared tomorrow as Jimmy Walsh Day, in honor of the manager of the local club. Walsh succeeded Del Gainer as pilot. Fairmont will meet Scottdale here.

Three games will be played here with Clarksburg on Labor Day, the third game being ordered by league officials as a play-over following a Clarksburg protest involving Beam, Fairmont pitcher.

BEAVER, Pa., Aug. 27.—The Beaver Falls Merchants took the second game in the Beaver County League championship series here last evening scoring a thrilling 3-to-2 margin over the Beaver Grays. Leo Carroll and George Petrosky tangled in a pretty pitcher's battle with each allowing seven hits.

SEEDED STARS BEATEN AT LONGWOOD

BROOKLINE, Mass., Aug. 27.—(AP.)—The second round matches of the national men's doubles championship were played for the benefit of seven of the eight seeded American teams and the top-ranked British entry, at Longwood yesterday.

The dent to the seeded list was unavoidable because the draw entangled two favored teams in the second round. Wilbur Coen, Jr., Kansas City, and Harrison Coggeshall, Des Moines, ranked sixth because they reached the finals of last week's Newport casino play, played unsteady tennis and bowed to the top-ranked Britisher, J. S. Olliff and F. J. Perry, the only foreign team to continue in the tourney, by scores of 6-3, 6-4, 6-3.

Another seeded team had trouble. Sydney Wood and Frank X. Shields, who were seeded seventh, just managed to edge out two crafty veterans, E. W. Peibleman, New York, and J. B. Fenno, Boston, 3-6, 6-2, 6-3, 3-6, 6-4.

Two other national championships, the mixed and veterans' doubles, got under way during the afternoon in easy fashion. Betty Nuthall, the English girl who won the American singles title at Forest Hills, L. I., on Sunday, again teamed with Lott to defend the titles they won here last year. They gained the second round by defeating Mr. and Mrs. M. T. Hill, Boston, 6-4, 6-4.

Betty's brother, Jimmy, played with Penelope Anderson, of Richmond, Va., and this international team scored a 6-4, 1-6, 6-3 victory over Sarah Palfrey, Brookline, and Junior Coen.

Today's quarter-finals will have Lott and Doeg opposing Vines and Gledhill; Van Ryn and Allison battling Wood and Shields; Tilden and Hunter playing Olliff and Perry, and Bell and Mangin in what is expected to be a furious struggle with Mercur and Hall.

GEMS REMAIN IN TIE WITH GENERALS

Fairmont and Clarksburg remained deadlocked for the lead in the Mid-Atlantic League yesterday, both clubs landing victories.

The Fairies walloped Scottdale, 8 to 4, in a free hitting game. Both teams garnered 14 safe hits, but those of the Scots were well scattered.

Clarksburg defeated the Wheeling Stogies in the tenth inning of a night game at Clarksburg, 7 to 6. A triple and a single turned the tide in the Generals' favor.

Jeannette was defeated by Charleroi, 13 to 1, the Guys hammering out 17 safe hits. Cumberland slugged out an 11-to-10 win over Johnstown, the Colts getting 20 safe blows.

turning in shots and making the balls do things that some of the game's oldest experts had declared to be impossible.

And now he has startled the old-timers again by introducing something else of which they never dreamed. It's nothing less than an oval table, just about the last word in radical departures from orthodox billiards.

THE CUE GAME has always been played on oblong tables, ranging from 4 by 8 feet to the championship type of 5x10. Plays on any other kind of table has not been considered as possible, the experts contending that without the straight rails and even dimensions it would be out of the question to get the required angles on shots. But Peterson, who possesses the hardest stroke in billiards, has upset their theories not only by introducing an oval table but by actually demonstrating its practicability in person. In St. Louis the other day, he gave an exhibition before a large gathering and showed with the use of reverse english that shots could be figured out and executed accurately on the oval surface. Some of the shots he made were so weird as to amaze the onlookers, though they had come to expect almost anything from Peterson. "They told me it couldn't be done," he said, "and that angles could not be figured, so I just decided to prove to them that there is nothing impossible on a billiard table. My challenge of 'Show me a billiard shot that I can't make' still goes. Let them name the conditions."

LEADERS TO CLASH

Today is the third day of the competition and it appears that the team with the best pitching staff is going to win it. Heavy hitting has marked the playing of the first two days games.

Washington flashed a powerful attack. Holbrook, a pip of a hitter, playing left field, hit a double, triple and a home run, the last smash clearing three men from the sacks.

Roudabush, the Senator pitching ace, helped his own cause by hitting two triples and a home run. Plenty of talent abounds on the Washington club.

That crowd of hard-hitting printers from Chicago are going to make trouble for Washington. With De Carewe on the mound, the Chicago aggregation hammered the Cleveland team all over the pastures out at Forbes Field.

Last evening the delegates were entertained at theater party at the Schenley Theater, and today a trip through the Heinz plant was the entertainment feature. The entertainment committee has wisely left this evening open, so the delegates will have an opportunity to amuse themselves. Yesterday's scores:

SOCCER LOOPS CARD CONFABS FOR TODAY

A meeting of the proposed Panhandle and Keystone soccer leagues will be held at Bridgeville this evening in the Owls Hall. At this session, the teams are expected to post forfeits and elect officers for the coming season.

The first meeting was held Sunday with 13 teams represented. From the present outlook, it would appear as if the old Keystone League will be revived at this session. Cecil Heidelberg, Shannon A. A., Primrose and Bridgeville have stated their intentions of entering this loop to play senior soccer.

The Pittsburgh Central League awarded franchises to the Pittsburgh Celtics and the Pittsburgh Rovers at its session and will close the loop at eight teams.

Two of the teams are reported to be having trouble getting suitable grounds. This always is the case until after Thanksgiving Day in a Saturday league. The high school football teams usually use the parks and soccer has a tough time until the close of the school season.

Friday evening at Suterville, a meeting will be held to try and organize the old Mon-Yough Soccer League. Gratztown, Fitz Henry, West Newton, Herminie, Madison and others have agreed to attend the session.

Nick Altrock Says:

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 27.—There will be no more apoplexy over this year's pennant races. The Cubs and A's are in and they will pick up the World Series right where they left off last year. Except old Hack Wilson will probably carry a parasol with him when he covers center field. Of course, teams have blown bigger leads than the Cubs have. Mooching back into my historical statistics, I remember half a dozen years ago this time the Pirates had the pennant right in their handkerchief pocket and then dropped six straight to the Giants at the Polo Grounds. But next month the Cubs won't drop anything at the Polo Grounds except, maybe, the Giants.

Wherever You Are! Spit is a horrid word, but it's worse if on the end of your cigar

Over 7,500 cigar factories are registered by the U. S. Government. Over 7,400 of these hand-roll cigars, producing 50 percent of the output. Every hand-rolled cigar—made by American Cigar Co. or anyone else—is subject to the possible danger of "spit-tipping." Certified Cremo is absolutely free from spit-tipping—No Cremo is made by hand.

The choicest, tenderest leaves that the crop affords are scientifically treated by methods recommended by the United States Department of Agriculture. Certified Cremo's purity is safeguarded along every step of the way by amazing inventions that bind, roll, wrap and tip the cigars!

LOCAL NETTERS ENTER BEAVER, W. VA. PLAY

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN.

Pittsburgh net stars are preparing to pull up stakes this week-end and hie afield for the Labor Day meetings at Morgantown and Beaver Falls, in the former of which municipalities there will be staged the second annual Morgantown Country Club invitation tournament, beginning on Friday, while in the latter there will be reeled off the revival of the historic Beaver County championships with opening guns fired on Saturday afternoon. The Mountaineer event will run over Saturday and Sunday, with finals billed for Monday. The Beaver titular affair will be closed on Sunday, resumed on Monday and wound up the following Saturday. The same day will behold also the inaugural battles of the re-established Allegheny County championships on the Duquesne Library courts, Duquesne, Pa.

STARS TO PLAY

According to word from West Virginia, the Morgantown conclave will draw a strong group of aspirants, including B. F. Arkle, Wheeling flash and defending titleholder; Sam Cohn, spectacular stylist from Beckley, W. Va.; C. T. Trask, cagy Charleston veteran; Red Brown, Davis-Elkins luminary and state intercollegiate premier, and the rambling Greensburg trio, Tack Hammer, Don Snyder, and Dillinger Hixson. The Pittsburgh Athletic Association will be represented in the men's milling by Billy O'Loughlin, Pitt freshman streak, Jack Lauler and Paul Sullivan, while Miriam Sullivan will carry the Winged Head into the women's play.

"The Morgantown Country Club," declared Tournament Chairman Charley Hodges in a long distance 'phone confab with the writer last week, "is putting on this invitation meet with the idea of laying the foundation for a sectional tourney next year. We are virtually certain that in 1931 we will receive sanction from the United States Lawn Tennis Association to hold the first annual Northern West Virginia championships."

ENTRY STRONG

An exceptionally large and capable entry list is lining up for the Beaver tilting. Chairman Howdy Campbell announces that his College Hill host will compete pretty nearly without exception, which means tennis of the caliber to be expected from such racqueteers as Don Reader, Howdy and Dick Campbell, Bill Potts, Johnny Hecker, Eddie Clarke, Vernon Flinner, Charley Arnold, and Stewart Snodgrass. Harold Mathieson, Pittsburgh Center Boys' champion, will probably journey over from Koppel to compete, while the McCabe boys, Bill, Al, and Willis, should come up from Coraopolis.

Morgantown entrants are requested to write or phone Charles Hodges, in care of the Dominion News, Morgantown, W. Va. Howard E. Campbell, Fourth avenue, College Hill, Beaver Falls, Pa., is handling the Beaver details. Beaver Falls 26-W will catch him by phone. Meanwhile, early shoppers for the Allegheny County contesting may write to Chairman Sam Keller at 559 Sixth avenue, McKeesport, or call him at McKeesport 8254.

BOXER DIES AFTER KAYO

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 27.—(AP.)—Frankie Campbell, 26, one of the Pacific Coast's leading heavyweight boxers, died from a cerebral hemorrhage here yesterday 13 hours after he had been knocked unconscious by Max Baer, of Livermore, in the fifth round of a savage bout at Recreation Park. His real name was Camilli.

Physicians, fearing to operate, had spent the night administering oxygen to prolong the fighter's life.

Baer's arrest was ordered immediately by Police Chief William J. Quinn. The Livermore boxer was booked on a technical charge of manslaughter and released on $10,000 bail, posted by Ancil Hoffman, promoter of the bout.

Baer backed his opponent into a corner in the fifth round and sent a smashing right to the jaw. Campbell collapsed in a sitting posture on the ropes. He was defenseless under the blows the Livermore boxer continued to direct at him. Finally Campbell, unconscious, slipped to the floor and Referee Irwin raised Baer's hand in victory without the formality of a count.

Baer, grief-stricken, explained his determination to win caused him to make certain Campbell was actually "out" before withholding his blows.

U. S., BRITISH TRACK STARS CLASH

CHICAGO, Aug. 27.—(AP.)—Under the refulgent rays of huge arc lights, winged mercuries of the British Empire and the United States clash on historic Soldier Field tonight in another international classic of the cinder paths.

The battle of brain and flying spikes, the fourth dual international track and field meet between the two English speaking nations, promised an estimated throng of more than 25,000 spectators thrills and new records.

England, aided by its best talent from 10 dominions, presented a formidable front but was expected to lose in the 14 event struggle, although the result appeared to hinge on but two events—the 400 yard relay and the 480 yard shuttle races. In these two races, the Americans had the best record on season's form.

FANS SELECT FIRST TEAMS

Football fans who have followed with particular intentness the doings of Pitt elevens for the past 20 years, and there appear to be plenty of the ilk in the neighborhood, are wasting little time in getting into all-time team contest.

James J. Long, veteran Pittsburgh sport scribe, will select an all-time Pitt eleven. Tickets to Pitt's home games will be given those fans who come the closest to naming the identical eleven selected by Long, with a pair of season passes to all of the Panthers' home contest going to match Long's team position for position.

A number of selections have been received already, with the contest not due to close until the week before Pitt's opening game with Waynesburg, September 27.

In last Sunday's issue of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, on the sport pages, there appeared an article dealing with the outstanding centers in Pitt history. Next Sunday, the famous tackles will be dealt with.

The winner (or winners) picking the same lineup as Long will receive a season pass to all of Pitt's home games in the stadium.

Those picking 10 out of 11 players will receive two tickets to the Pitt-Notre Dame game.

Those picking 9 out of 11 will receive two tickets to the Pitt-Tech game.

Those picking 8 out of 11 will receive one seat to the Notre Dame game.

Those picking 7 out of 11 will receive one ticket to the Tech or Penn State game.

Those picking 6 out of 11 will receive one ticket to the Waynesburg game.

Mrs. Hill Faces Test In Western Tourney

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 27.—(AP.)—A defending champion and her nearest rival in medal score faced each other today in the twenty-eighth annual woman's western golf tournament.

Mrs. O. S. Hill, Kansas City, titleholder, was paired in the second round with Mrs. Melvin Jones, Chicago, woman's western medal play champion.

This match brought forth predictions from tournament followers of a possible third extra-hole struggle of the tournament, two first-round matching having exceeded the regulation 18.

Mrs. Hill qualified with a 75, the low medal score; Mrs. Jones had an 83. Mrs. Hill won her first match 5 and 4. Mrs. Jones was winner 4 and 3, both their opponents being of similar caliber.

Three intersectional matches were scheduled today. Miss Helen Lawson, Los Angeles, was paired with Mrs. G. W. Tyson, Kansas City. Mrs. Gregg Lifur, Los Angeles, met Miss Rena Nelson, Chicago. Miss Virginia Van Wie, Chicago, faced Mrs. Roy Green, Los Angeles.

EVENING SUN-TELEGRAPH MARKETS

Bears Annoy Bulls — Local Stocks Quiet

BEARS RETARD ADVANCE OF BULLS

Price Movement Becomes Somewhat Irregular After Rise; Volume on Increase

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—(AP.)—Speculators for the rise found the stock market still determined today to take administrations of bullishness in small and cautious doses.

After a substantial extension of yesterday's gains during the first hour profit-taking cropped out in considerable volume and bears unsettled the list by searching out weak spots. Operations for the advance were strenuously pressed forward but the price movement became somewhat irregular. Trading was in the largest volume in several days.

After advancing a point U. S. Steel attracted selling and sold off a point or so under yesterday's close but was supported well. On the whole pivotal shares moved narrowly. During the early rise in which utilities and specialties were prominent Allied Chemical rose 8, Delaware and Hudson 6 and Atchison, Eastman, Worthington, Safeway, American and Foreign Power, Electric Power and Light, Stone & Webster, New Haven, Sears Roebuck and American Tobacco B, 2 to 3. These advances were reduced later although good buying reappeared in some of the merchandising, amusement and manufacturing shares. Vanadium was heavily sold, breaking more than 4. Oliver Farm common and Bohn Aluminum dropped 4 to new lows and Oliver Farm preferred sold off about 7, before rallying.

SEE TURN IN TIDE

Professional operators appeared determined to make the most of the more cheerful tenor of business and trade news. Although the indicated improvement thus far is slight and few bankers or statistical services are predicting any spectacular acceleration of business in the fall, the fact that the tide appeared to have turned instilled renewed bullishenthusiasm.

The day's trade reports were not in agreement as to the extent of the improvement in business evident since August 1. The weekly steel trade reviews were a little contradictory.

Iron Age estimated that steel mill operations for the country at large had improved in the last week but 1 per cent, placing production at 54 per cent of capacity, against 52 a fortnight ago.

"Steel" agreed with Dow, Jones & Co., which yesterday placed operations at 58 per cent, against 54½ a week previously. The steel trade reviews indicated that consumers are now willing to buy well into the future evidently feeling that prices have touched bottom, while producers are reluctant to sell much at the current low levels.

BUILDING GAINS

An encouraging development was an important in building operations. F. W. Dodge Corporation's daily average for the first three weeks of August showing a slight increase over the extremely low levels of July. Freight car loading for the second week of the month showed a gain of about 2 per cent over the previous week. A little more than the normal seasonal advance but the total was still the lowest since 1922. The American Federation of Labor estimated that unemployment in August had been cut down 3-10 of one per cent from July.

Credit showed a slightly firmer undertone, perhaps the first reflection of the month end and holiday requirements. Call money still held at 2 per cent.

Big Business Men of the Far West Know How To Play

—By B. C. FORBES—

IN THE FAR WEST, Aug. 27.—Concluding a talk to a large gathering of western businessmen I observed:

"Man was not made for business. Business was made for man."

Before speeding eastward to re-enter the thick of the financial and business fray in the enervating environs of Wall street, May I, fresh from an experience unique in my life—and unique in the world be permitted to wax somewhat sentimental, giving the promise that the sentiment shall not be unrelated to business and to men of business? (Tomorrow I'll return to unsentimental facts).

Mr. Forbes

Can you imagine a thousand responsible men of affairs betaking themselves out of the world of hustle and bustle and money-making, hiking off to the heart of a forest and amid giant redwoods, thousands of years old, holding picnic camp-style for three weeks connected with the rest of mankind by only one lone telephone?

Out here in the West men go in more for the out-of-doors. They go in more too for human fellowship, for fraternizing, for friendliness, for respite from the daily toil of the mart of-fice, factory, shop.

The Bohemian Club of California, composed mostly of men who have made some mark in their walk of life, own a "grove," dotted with camps of all varieties from the humblest tent to almost palatial structures, about a hundred miles from San Francisco. Under its auspices is this unique outing.

ON ENTERING a placard, "Today's Stock Market" attracted my attention. It carried this report: "What the H—— do we care?"

When later I expressed a desire to procure an evening newspaper, my host promptly and emphatically ruled me out of order. "Forget it!" he commanded. All "shop" was forbidden. The keynote of the whole gathering is sounded annually at the opening, when the first elaborate ceremony is the burning, in effigy, of "Dull Care."

Music sounds through the forest daily and nightly. A great orchestra, composed wholly of members, plays in the evenings by the side of a lake sentineled by redwoods hundreds of feet high and thousands of years old, the listeners squatting on the banks and the edges of the woods.

Men sit on logs around a central camp fire, talking. Vocal concerts are given. The musical and dramatic piece de resistance is a grand-scale play composed exclusively for this one performance, and staged in gorgeous style in an open-air theater the like of which is not to be found the wide world over. Hundreds take part. Every seat is occupied—yet from the rise of the first to the drop of the last curtain you could hear a pin fall.

BUT IT IS NEITHER the music nor the drama, appealing though they are, that distinguishes this fraternal assembly from all others. It is what all call "the spirit of the grove."

Dignity is left behind. A most punctilious New Yorker, distinguished alike for his professional eminence, his blue blood, his sartorial perfection and his capital society manners, was greeted on his first stroll through the woods:

"Hello, old whiskers, who let you in here?"

After recovering his breath, and after undergoing further verbal hazing, he caught the spirit of the place—and had he told me "the most enjoyable experience of my life."

A military general introduced at one camp was greeted by the first to shake his hand: "Hello, corporal!" He winced. Promptly he became known all over as "the corporal." And now when he writes to any Bohemian, he signs himself "the corporal."

HERBERT HOOVER, when secretary of commerce, attended—he still maintains his camp. The toastmaster of one function where Herb was expected to speak, began an introduction so flowery that the guest blushed, for half an hour the toastmaster narrated the virtues and achievements and glories of "the next distinguished speaker." Hoover meanwhile squirming — and then called upon a well-known wit to make the speech of the evening!

Dignitaries, bankers, captains of industry, men of letters, railway presidents, kings of commerce—all become schoolboys again, shed their publicly-worn masks, become their real selves, and revel in this taste of back-to-nature, back to unhedged fraternity, back to the simplicities and frolics and irresponsibility of boyhood.

Pennsy Loadings Higher for Week

Total loaded cars handled by the Pennsylvania Railroad system during the week ended August 23 were 143,512 compared with 141,544 in the preceding week, with 177,338 in the corresponding week of 1929 and with 166,889 in the 1928 period.

NEW YORK CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—(AP.)—The resistance to selling pressure shown by public utility shares in the Curb market in recent sessions attracted further support today. Prices of an extensive list of utilities progressed toward higher levels as the rest of the market remained quiet and firm.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—Following is the list of transactions on the New York Curb Exchange, giving all stocks and bonds traded in (00 omitted in sales column of stock list; 000 omitted in sales column of bond list):

Stock Exchange Topics

Sun Life Assurance Co. Favors Public Utility Securities.

A study of the list of securities held by the Sun Life Assurance Company might explain within reason the confidence of the officials of the company as expressed in several statements in the last few months. The company, it develops, is particularly partial to public utility shares, having owned on December 31, last, $17,900,000 American Telephone and Telegraph capital stock, $27,085,000 Consolidated Gas, of New York, $11,900,008 Electric Bond and Share, $10,457,00 Detroit Edison and $11,987,000 Public Service of New Jersey common. Substantial holdings of other utility issues were included. It holds a widely diversified list of industrial and miscellaneous stocks also, the market value of which on December 31, last, was $346,000,000.

Carloadings on the Pennsylvania Railroad System for the week ended August 23 were the largest for any week since June 28, last, when they amounted to 147,468. Loadings on the Pennsylvania are watched with unusual interest at the present time as indicating the trend of business throughout the country, as Pennsylvania loadings come out about a week before the loadings for the railroads as a whole are announced at Washington. The increase in Pennsylvania loadings for the week ended August 16 foreshadowed the improvement in total car loadings just announced, which amounted to 922,823 cars, an increase of 18,666 cars over the preceding week. The second successive increase in Pennsylvania loading may foreshadow continued improvement throughout the rest of the country.

It must be admitted that trade opinions are slightly improved despite the fact that there is no evidence as yet of a distinct upward trend. The anticipated fall betterment is expected to help the situation. Although authorities are not yet willing to predict that anything more than a small seasonal increase in activity is developing. Unemployment has been keeping down business of retailers and this has reflected down the line back to those who supply raw materials.

Worthington Pump responded to declaration of $1.75 a share on behalf of back dividends on the preferred "A" and $1.50 on the "B," although it was considered disappointing in some quarters. However, at next quarterly meeting, action may be taken to wipe out remaining preferred dividend arrearage in a lump sum, and that such a step will be preliminary to split-up of the common shares on a four for one basis.

R. C. A. Victor plants at Camden, N. J., are now turning out approximately 2,200 radios a day. The payroll has steadily increased and at the present time the company is employing 16,000 people. By September 10 a full working force of 20,000 will be employed. From now on there will be a steady stepping up of operations until capacity of output of 9,000 radios a day is reached.

Sentiment is somewhat more cheerful than it has been in recent weeks. Most observers are advising care in making buying selections. There is a tendency to wait until after the holiday next Monday. But quite a few interests are in favor of picking up the standard stocks on a scale during technical recessions. They are advising customers against following the speculative moves in the specialties, which are under pool domination.

WALL STREET HEARS

That a cut in Mid-Continent crude prices is still threatened, and may come earlier than at first anticipated.

That large Wall street banks are receiving more optimistic business reports from their out-of-town correspondents.

That National Biscuit's third quarter earnings are not coming up to expectations.

That the proposed merger of Gillette and Autostrop, at first believed to have been discussed on an even share for share exchange basis, is now being considered on the basis of 1¼ shares of Autostrop for one of Gillette.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—Cotton opened steady today at a decline of 4 points to an advance of 11 with most months higher on a continuation of the recent demand which appeared to include considerable Wall street buying. There was some selling of near months against purchases of later deliveries, but prices held within 5 or 6 points of the best at the end of the first half hour.

STEEL OUTLOOK BRIGHTER

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—The Iron Age in its weekly summary of the iron and steel trade tomorrow will say:

Business in iron and steel has shown only a slight change for the better but sentiment in the trade, though chastened by the protracted depression, is cautiously hopeful.

The passing of pessimism engendered by the drought, scattered evidences of greater interest on the part of steel buyers and additional advance in scrap prices are among the factors that are influencing current appraisals of the future.

In view of the inconsequential change in actual mill bookings no general upturn in steel plant operations is yet manifest, but gains exceed declines and average ingot output for the country at large has risen to 54 per cent, compared with 53 per cent last week and 52 per cent a fortnight ago.

PRICE TREND FIRMER

Heavy melting steel has advanced on substantial mill purchases in the three most important buying centers. At Pittsburgh it went up 25 cents a ton for the third time in as many weeks. At Chicago and Philadelphia advances of 50 cents a ton are reported.

Prices of finished steel have undergone further declines, although it is noteworthy that both buyers and sellers are beginning to think in terms of longer commitments. Some large consumers are attempting to close contracts for as long as a year ahead at present market quotations. Mills, on the other hand, are reluctant to obligate themselves beyond the end of the quarter, and at least one producer has notified customers that it will advance prices on bars, shapes and plates September 15.

TIN PLATE SPURTS

Tin plate specifications following more definite information on the extent of drought damage, have shown a spurt and shipments by the leading producers during the week were of record proportions.

Road machinery manufacturers are also reported to be taking more steel, and business from the oil and gas industry is holding up. A Youngstown mill has booked 35,000 tons of electrically welded pipe for a gas line from Kentucky to Indiana points, and prospective work indicates that the construction of a national pipe line network will prove a strong support to the steel industry for at least another year.

Iron Age composite price for finished steel fell to 2.142 cents a pound from 2.156 cents last week. The pig iron composite price remains at $16.88 a gross ton.

HOW'S BUSINESS?

ACTUAL FACTS ON CONDITIONS TODAY

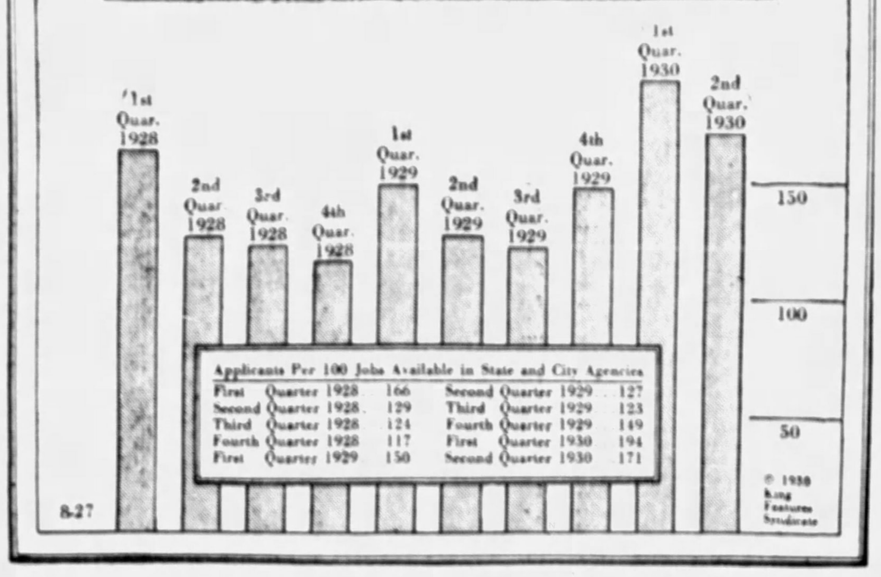
General Unemployment Shows Big Drop

Chart shows the number of applicants for every 100 vacant jobs and positions registered at the State and municipal employment agencies in 32 important States and the District of Columbia during the past ten quarter-year periods since January 1st, 1928. Source: Employment Service, U. S. Dept. of Labor.



Applicants Per 100 Jobs Available in State and City Agencies

First Quarter 1928	166	Second Quarter 1929	127
Second Quarter 1928	129	Third Quarter 1929	123
Third Quarter 1928	124	Fourth Quarter 1929	149
Fourth Quarter 1928	117	First Quarter 1930	194
First Quarter 1929	150	Second Quarter 1930	171

Nearly every index to employment covers only factory workers. But this one, showing the number of applicants per 100 available jobs of every description, is perhaps one of the best indicators of general unemployment in the United States today. The second quarter of 1930 shows a considerable improvement over the first quarter, and is nearly down to the level of the first quarter of 1928.

No Change in Business Conditions Seen

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

BUSINESS HAS CONTINUED on an even keel for the past month. There has been no concrete evidence of gains but there has been an improvement in the attitude of most business men. Whether or not this will be reflected in actual progress in business activity during September and October remains to be seen. Optimism was rampant early this year but, after a brief revival, business settled down to a lower rate of activity.

Seasonal precedents indicate that there should be at least some improvement during the next two months. The termination of the vacation period is naturally followed by increased activity. To be of real help to business, however, demand will have to gain sufficient momentum to carry the changed conditions through the period of inactivity which ordinarily takes place during the inventory taking time in December.

Unless this momentum is secured during September and October, the mere seasonal variation will be followed by another period of dullness and 1931 will be started without any material amount of ground having been gained.

Stock Market Effect

IN MOST OF THE DISCUSSIONS of the present state of business the break in stocks of last October has been given credit for the existing ills of commerce. While the precipitate drop in the prices of stocks was the immediate predecessor of the depression, it was more of a reflection of the state of business than a cause of the trouble.

Industry had oversold its market. The public had its fill of new cars, new radios and new furniture. A few industries, radio in particular, had over anticipated the market demands. It was necessary for industry to go through a quieter period to allow consumption to catch up to the supply.

During the boom period large profits had been made by manufacturers. The stock market was not only reflecting these gains but was anticipating further improvement at the same annual rate. Since this could not go on indefinitely, a few traders began to realize that stocks were selling out of line. As their number grew the demand for securities started to wane and finally the number of doubters became so great that prices started on a downward trend. The stock market merely recognized the fact that industry could not go on at an abnormal pace forever.

Business Prospects

IT WAS RIDICULOUS to expect industry to go on breaking records forever. By the same logic gains in activity may occur after industry has been working at a reduced pace long enough for it to catch up to demand. Most business men believe that this point has been attained. There have been few valleys in the graph of business conditions which have been wider than the present one.

It should be remembered, however, that business cannot resume the pace of 1929 within any short period of time. Just as it took more than six month for the downward movement of business to reach its low point, a similar time will be required for the upward swing to assert itself. Buying power cannot be fully restored until employment conditions improve. Employment will not be returned to normal until the general public is again purchasing commodities in large volume. The two are so interdependent that they must recover together. One cannot show a spurt ahead of the other.

"Before my little daughter was born I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound regularly. I was able to do my usual work and take pleasure in doing it. We were so happy when a wonderfully fine baby girl arrived to bless our home. I have enjoyed better health since the baby's birth than ever before. I am sure that I owe it all to your medicine and I heartily recommend it to all women who are weak or ailing."—Mrs. Chester Decker.

"Although I am only 22 years old I have four babies to care for. Before my first baby was born my mother urged me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound because I was so terribly weak. I had to lie down four or five times a day. After three bottles I could feel a great improvement. I still take the Vegetable Compound whenever I need it, for it gives me strength to be a good mother to my family. I will write to any woman about it."—Mrs. Vern L. Dennings.

Eighteen miles from Pgh., three miles from the railroad, there are 200 acres covered with pine and oak forests, through which run three fair sized streams. While access to this forest is all by concrete road, it is remote from civilization, and is an ideal place for a Summer home for one family or a group. If you want a place where your family can spend as healthful and carefree a summer as in the wilds of Maine, and from which you can commute daily to town, this can't be equaled, and the price is

DAILY TRUE STORY

Lovely Weather

"The art of conversation," said Orrin Holden, "died out with our forefathers."

"Nonsense, Orrin," his Aunt Della said, mildly, "people still talk."

Aunt Della spoke mildly to her nephew. Almost everyone who knew him spoke that way because he was exceedingly wealthy and exceedingly high-brow.

"Talk yes. Aunt Della they talk like Tennyson's brook they babble and burble and they don't say a thing worth repeating. I said that the art of conversation has died out."

"Perhaps," auntie paused and asked Smithers to lower the awning.

"Did you ever see it so hot?" she cried.

"Certainly. Down in Savannah and out in Coffeyville I have experienced a much higher temperature. One doesn't really see a hot day, you know."

"Lord help us," groaned Aunt Della.

The Hemingways dropped in, fat Mr. Gregory Hemingway, his wife and two daughters. They were neighbors. They would have liked very much to have Orrin Holden marry either one of their daughters, or both for that matter, if bigamy were legal and stylish.

"Hot enough for you?" Gregory Hemingway asked.

"Sufficiently warm," Smithers—the tray," Orrin said.

Smithers went to bring cooling drinks.

"Did you ever see such a hot day?" Agatha Hemingway asked.

"One experiences feels heat, but one doesn't see that," Miss Hemingway.

"Of course not, but one says so."

The cooling drinks came.

"Atrocious weather we've been having—fogs and rains all last month and regular Sahara desert weather this month, Mr. Holden," Mrs. Hemingway murmured.

Aunt Agrees

"Portions of the Sahara desert are quite cold," Orrin observed.

"I think the weather is just lovely," Arabella Hemingway remarked.

"Weather is a condition of pressure humidity precipitation or aridness," Orrin observed.

After a while the Hemingways left. Mr. Holden did not make any promises about coming over that night to the party. After they had gone he sighed heavily.

"This is another of endless proofs that the art of conversation died out with our forefathers, Aunt Della."

"I suppose so, Orrin, but you must admit that the weather has been beastly."

"But the weather is not a topic for conversation; it is merely a topic for talk and I detest talk just talk and talk, with no continuity or reason or goal. Someone says 'lovely weather we are having' and another replies 'Isn't it?' and they think they are conversing."

"I suppose so," Aunt Della agreed.

"In the old days someone would mention a book. This would lead to a comparison of Thackeray and Dickens. In turn this would lead to a delightful conversation about authors and their styles. I can remember my grandfather and an old friend of his. Someone mentioned receiving a most interesting letter from a mutual friend who was quite lame. What do you suppose followed?"

"Oh, a lot of conversation on different forms of lameness?"

"Indeed, no! That would be just talk. They began to converse about lame authors. Did physical lameness cause any mental lameness or, the reverse, mental alertness? Sir Walter Scott was lame. If he could have ridden to the hounds or whipped Loch Arneith for salmon, would he have turned out the delightful Waverly novels? If Lord Byron had been sound of limb, would he have remained sufficiently passive to have written the delightful 'Childe Harold?' See what I mean? I recall that my grandfather said he believed Robbie Burns' delightful poems of nature and about such things as wee field mice and scarlet tipped daisies would have remained unwritten if he had possessed a sound foot instead of one so badly clubbed."

"I see," said Aunt Della.

Talk of Weather

She and Orrin went over to Senator Griscomb's that next evening for dinner.

Former Ambassador Tuttle was also there.

"Hello, Mr. Holden—pretty nice weather these days," the Senator greeted Orrin.

"Adequate," Orrin said, wearily, and then: "By the way, Senator, what about this Soviet pulpwood situation?"

"That? Oh, it will settle itself—"

"Speaking of nice weather," former Ambassador Tuttle said, "when I was in Madrid we had days and days when the temperature was steadily at a hundred and two."

"It often runs for months at a hundred and twenty-four in portions of Death Valley, but where does that get us?" Orrin Holden asked, testily.

Senator Griscomb and former Ambassador Tuttle glanced at each other and shook their heads. This wealthy young Orrin Holden seemed to them to be a deadly dull and rather arrogant ass.

Miss Tuttle had been considered the handsomest American presented at court in many seasons. She was really beautiful and Orrin moved over to chat with her.

"Lovely weather we're having, Mr. Holden," the Tuttle girl gushed.

"Quite," Orrin said.

He promptly caught himself from being rude.

I understand that Baudenni is doing a fountain for the Piazza del Orpoto. What is the nature of it, shipping or wine-growing?"

I haven't heard, but speaking of Oporto, it reminds me of the atrocious weather we had there."

Orrin Holden gave up in disgust.

On the way home Aunt Della said: "Isn't Alicia Tuttle beautiful? Loveliest girl, so brilliant, such an intelligent face. I was so glad to see you interested in her, Orrin."

She's one of those weather-fools, thinks it's conversation. Imagine me sitting at breakfast with her all my days and listening to her telling me what sort of weather we were having when I could look out of the window or at my thermometer and barometer and see for myself."

Again Aunt Della sighed.

She wished Orrin would marry.

She wanted to see him happy. She wanted to see little children about. She would be happy if one of them were a girl named "Della."

Beautiful Girl

"But, good lands, dear," she was telling her friends, Mrs. Willoughby, "Orrin will never marry because all of us talk about the weather and he hates it, says it isn't conversation."

It was at this time when Susan Manning came back from her final year at a German school.

Orrin Holden had never met her.

He didn't even know about her.

He saw her riding past his place one morning.

He saw her coming out of a village shop next day.

He saw her just leaving the Fairfields Country Club with her father on the third day.

"I have seen the world's most beautiful girl according to my standard of beauty," he told his aunt.

"Who is she?"

"I don't know, but she is perfection."

"Well, find out," Aunt Della said, encouragingly.

Orrin did find out.

He dragged his aunt over to Major Carver's place when Tom Carver invited him and mentioned that Susan Manning would be there. Susan was just getting into her car as Orrin asked who Susan Manning might be and Tom pointed her out.

Orrin Holden could scarcely wait to get over to the major's.

He could scarcely wait until he got an introduction to her.

Tom performed the introduction and excused himself to go to his mother who had beckoned.

Susan sat down on the divan. Orrin sat beside her and stared at her beautiful features, her delicately nature-tinted cheeks, her wavy corn-silk colored hair, her wide-apart intelligent brilliant eyes.

She was the first girl he ever had really wanted to grab and hug and kiss.

"Er—it's lovely weather, isn't it," he said, inanely.

His face blazed. What an asinine thing he had said.

"Quite seasonable," Susan admitted, but she stared at him strangely for a moment.

There was silence. She turned to him.

"I don't think," she said, "that you are complimentary."

"Really?"

"You have sized me up as being absolutely inane."

"Why, Miss Manning! That's a bit absurd—I mean, I never though, anything like that. I saw at a glance that you were highly intelligent."

Embarrassed

"Oh, I've been told about you you long for the old art of conversation, you maintain that talking about the weather is the lowest form of intelligence—and then you tell me that it is a lovely day——"

"But, Miss Manning——"

"You sized me up and decided that my level of intelligence was just sufficient to grasp the meaning of weather talk, so you violated all of your rules and informed me that it was a lovely day——"

Someone came to take her away just then, leaving Orrin Holden greatly embarrassed.

"May I ride with you tomorrow?" he asked, hurriedly.

"At seven, if you are early enough, Mr. Holden."

He was up bright and early.

"Damn the weather," he grumbled. It was raining.

A telephone call came. It was Susan Manning.

"Slip into a poncho and come along," she said.

When he reached there they had an interesting ride.

Susan could converse!

A month of being about together and Aunt Della asked Orrin what he and Susan talked about.

"The weather," Orrin confessed.

Aunt Della said, "Of course not—come on, tell me, like a good boy."

"We talked about the weather today—we hoped it would be a lovely day on the eighteenth of next month, because we are going to be married on that day."

It turned out to be "lovely weather."

Training schools for dry agents are being established throughout the country, and everybody ought to help the students get an appropriate college song. Something like this—

Snoop . . . pooh pooh pa doop
Snoop for the flowing bow . . el!
Slink . . . and snatch a drink
And shoot the gink who throws it in the sink.

All the dry sleuth colleges might have football teams . . . but of course the rules should be changed to permit the players to tip-toe instead of run.

And the college yell should be whispered.

About the only time modern bored youth is stirred to action is when he reaches for another cigaret.

Ans.—

If a "certain guy's wife" thinks she can intimidate a peace loving homebody by getting her pal to send threatening letters through the United States mail, then Aunt Bella holds little hope for the future of America. This woman might try understanding her husband a little better, and then maybe she wouldn't drive him into the arms of the more attractive and (how!) sympathetic.

Inside Story of Fresh Water Piracy Racket

Members of the Manhattan Muskrats, a notorious gang that flourished for weeks in various public parks.

NOTE—This is one of a series of articles on racketeers and rackets.

River pirates have been a source of constant annoyance to many of our readers, but little has ever been written about the Manhattan Muskrats, whose leader for many years was a woman known as Minnie the Mink.

Minnie the Mink acquired her sobriquet because, when encountered by an acquaintance, she was invariably called "Minnie the Mink."

Space does not permit a complete account of the exploits of these vixens, but it is a well known fact that, led by Minnie the Mink, the Manhattan Muskrats often rented row boats and stayed out long past the time limit. The authorities in charge of the boat concession would get discouraged and go home, and only then would the Muskrats return the boat. It is estimated that they thus accumulated millions of dollars in unpaid row boat rents.

Unnecessary Traffic Signals Are a Nuisance

The news that the State Highway Department is planning to eliminate hundreds of electric traffic signals will be welcomed by motorists. Lights periodically halting traffic will not be permitted unless the average number of vehicles or pedestrians per hour passing an intersection or entering from the side street comes up to certain requirements.

No one desires, to be sure, to eliminate anything that is necessary for safety; but the fact is that some of the small country towns around Pittsburgh have erected stop-go lights that are wholly unnecessary. They stand at intersections where for many minutes at a time no traffic will enter from the side street. The motorist on the main highway will have to stop when there is no need for it.

In thus halting main highway traffic these lights may cause congestion, and thus actually do harm. A flashing beacon, calling attention to the fact that the motorist was approaching an intersection, would be sufficient to put him on his guard.

The Pittsburgh Motor Club deserves credit for its campaign against this nuisance—a campaign which, after disheartening setbacks, is now bearing fruit.

Illiteracy Is Fought In Pittsburgh Homes

There has been an abundance of good news in the last few days—news relating to the progress that public education is making in the Pittsburgh region. Twenty-five hundred teachers are attending the annual county institute, getting inspiration for the task they are soon to take up again. Dr. Ben Graham, acting superintendent of city schools, is preparing for an enrollment of 108,300 pupils when classes resume next Tuesday. Grove City College announces plans for a new science hall and chapel. The State Teachers College at California, Pa., also gets ready to expand.

Most interesting of all is the disclosure of the State Department of Public Instruction that there are now in Pittsburgh 18 public school teachers who never see a classroom but devote their entire time to instructing foreign-born mothers in the latter's own homes. We take it as a matter of course that children shall be educated. The education of parents is another matter. If illiteracy is to be wholly stamped out there will have to be a good deal of educational work among adult immigrants.

The United States Senate Committee that came to Pittsburgh about 10 years ago to investigate the steel strike found foreigners here who, notwithstanding a residence in Pittsburgh extending over many years, were unable to speak English. Living in colonies of their fellow-nationals, they had found it possible to get along without our language. If that condition still prevails to any extent today the work of the 18 teachers who visit the foreigners' homes will go far to bring improvement.

To many it will be a surprise, and to all forward-looking citizens a pleasure, to learn of this commendable activity.

Reassuring Report on Pennsylvania's Crops

Although we who live in the cities are prone to forget it, agriculture is one of Pennsylvania's principal industries and the mainstay of a large part of the population. Even in Allegheny County there are not a few people who live by farming. So it is gratifying to be informed by T. D. Harmon, chairman of the agricultural committee of the Chamber of Commerce, that reports of the damage done to the state's crops by drought have been exaggerated.

Wheat, Mr. Harmon tells us, will run four and one-half bushels to the acre above the ten-year average of 18 bushels, the potato crop will be little short of last year's size, and the apple crop will be larger. Corn and buckwheat, he says, are the only crops that have been very noticeably damaged.

If the reports of drought damage in other states have not also been exaggerated, conditions appear favorable for good prices, which will react decidedly to the advantage of Pennsylvania farmers with satisfactory yields. And their prosperity will, of course, affect that of all the rest of us.

Mountain Climbing in The Keystone State

The memorial services held by the Pennsylvania Alpine Club for its late chaplain, Bishop James H. Darlington, of Harrisburg, directed attention to an organization which, in a modest way, is doing a great deal to promote appreciation of Pennsylvania's splendid highland scenery.

The club was founded a few years ago by Col. Henry W. Shoemaker, former publisher of the Altoona Tribune, chairman of the Pennsylvania Historical Commission, member of the Pennsylvania Forestry Commission, and now United States minister to Bulgaria. Col. Shoemaker's enthusiasm for the Keystone State's mountains and forests, its history and folklore, its fauna and flora, is inexhaustible, and he has succeeded in transmitting some of it to a great many other Pennsylvanians—much to their benefit, since it has opened their eyes to beauties not previously perceived and introduced them to pleasures not previously experienced.

Pennsylvania's highest peak, Negro Mountain, in Somerset County, is only a little more than 3,000 feet high; so the Pennsylvania Alpine Club has little opportunity for daring feats. The climbing of the state's loftiest knobs has not made the names of the Alpine Club members immortal, but it has increased their love of Nature, and their reverence for the Almighty, and their pride in Pennsylvania—things that are not to be disdained.

"Bugs" Baer Says:

Miniature Golf

They discovered enough terrain in the wide, open spaces to enable President Hoover to build a miniature golf course.

Bugs Baer

Mr. Hoover thought he was on a vacation until he discovered somebody with a niblick in his hand.

The White House spokesman galloped up on three wheels to learn that his official utterances for 1930-31 would be limited to the ponderous information, "fore."

A miniature golf course is a national park in tabloid form. Some golfers take their miniature golf courses an hour after each meal in a tablespoonful of water.

It's not golf and it's not marbles. It's somewhere between the two major and minor sports of America. Pour a little salad dressing on the course and you have a nice meal.

And President Hoover would have had a lot of fun on the miniature links if his lead pencil hadn't dropped out of his vest pocket so often.

All of our chief executives have been famous for their devotion to outdoor sports. Cleveland was an expert fisherman, Roosevelt went after big game, Coolidge was a baseball fan and Hoover likes to take a full swing with a putter.

The new outdoor game of condensed billiards has taken the nation by the storm doors. They are playing it night and day and back again. You see shadowy silhouettes in the twilight weaving grotesque contortions on the landscape like a stork pecking away at an oyster cracker.

You observe ghostly marionettes in the dawn tapping lightly but firmly at elusive camphor balls which roll erratically across the velvety lawn and come to rest like a frog on a hot stove lid.

We don't know what they are trying to do. Which makes the game absolutely impartial. Neither do they.

You can play it yourself on a bath mat with an old umbrella handle and an egg. All you do is to tap the doorknob and then bend over like a weed puller in an abandoned garden.

The game is something like mouse polo. Any child can play the game. Any grown-ups should be restrained by subpenas.

It may be part of the economy program. We do not approve of this abbreviated contest of giants. Why should a big, outdoor man handcuff himself to a midget playground?

It seems to us that miniature golf was invented by a man who had a terrific slice off the tee and was afraid to show it.

THE GLIDER IN PEACE AND WAR

By Archibald Henderson

The recent development of popular interest, truly world-wide, in air gliding is a phenomenon of great interest and significance. It was given great development and vogue in Germany in very recent years and it has now international popularity and support. At first it was thought of as a popular sport and as an admirable preparation for air pilots who planned going in for aviation. It is a delightful sport for boys and girls, and skill in the management of the glider can be very readily acquired.

The recent developments in gliding indicate important possibilities for the use of the glider in transportation. Gliders have been trailed behind an airplane for great distances with entire success. This clearly points to the likelihood of the use of the glider as a single car of an aerial passenger or even freight train. They can doubtless be used in numbers as trailers to huge airplanes. The airplane is the locomotive; a series of gliders, attached to it, would trail along behind like a train of cars.

A huge airplane, with six gliders trailing behind, each carrying passengers and mail, might take off from Seattle bound for New York, via San Francisco, Denver, Salt Lake City, Chicago, St. Louis and Rochester, for example. When the aerial train approaches San Francisco, the glider containing passengers and mail for that city could be detached and glide down to earth. This experiment has already been successfully attempted, the glider descending gently to earth from a dirigible to which it was attached.

The locomotive for the aerial train might, of course, be either a dirigible or a giant airplane. The process described above might be repeated at each of the cities for which the different gliders were destined. By placing all passengers and mail in the gliders, the locomotive airplane would be enabled to carry a much heavier load of fuel than at present, when it is weighted with fuel, passengers and mail.

Whether in peace or war, the use of glider and airplane, as vehicles of transfer, would enable a passenger to change from one dirigible to another, for example. Gliding down from a dirigible, going from New Orleans to New York, for example, the glider might effect a landing at Washington.

Then the passenger, quickly changing from glider to airplane might mount into the air, and be transferred to a dirigible, already in flight and on its way, say, to St. Louis.

Transfer could thus be made from war planes to battleships, by means of gliders; and then vice versa, from battleships to war planes or dirigibles by means of airplanes. These things are possibilities today. They will be commonplaces tomorrow.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Who are you?

"I'm a business man," you say. Or a saleswoman, or a carpenter, or a housewife, or a student.

Sometimes the answer comes easily, happily. It is easy to see that you like your job—that it floods your being with pride and content.

But quite as often, the answer doesn't come happily. It lags or rasps. There's discontent or indifference in your tone. Something's wrong. Whatever you're doing, you're not satisfied. You make excuses. You blame other people. Don't! No one else is responsible for your success or your failure. The answer to all your problems lies within yourself. You have said what you do, what you are, in your outer life. But what do you do; what are you in your wish-life? Answer that and you'll solve your every riddle.

Never heard of a wish-life? Every man has one, as surely as he has blood and bones. Deep within every heart lies a secret pattern of dream and desire—a secret pattern of what that man wishes life to be. And his happiness depends on the adjustment he makes between that wish-life and his outward occupation.

Sometimes he can fit his daily existence to that secret pattern. Then he is a happy man. His life is all of a piece, within and without. His strength is not wasted by secret hungers and rebellions. But tragically often a man's surface life and wish-life are poles apart. Then he is truly "a city divided against itself." In comparison with that vivid, inner kingdom the actual world seems dull and futile. So he takes refuge in his wish-life from all disappointments and failure, from criticism and consequences. And gradually he ceases to fight or even to face reality, finding all compensation in that secret hideaway.

Half the people you know are leading meaningless, disjointed existences. That is why. They have never been able to find expression of their wish-lives. If they had, they would have been amazingly different. They might have been tramps, where now they are bank presidents. Or ballet dancers instead of scrub-women. Or poets instead of plumbers. But always they would have been happier. For they would have fed an inner hunger, expressed an inner dream. And, because they have found no vent for that hunger, their lives are all awry.

Study your Wish-Life. Study it honestly. Much of it may be pure silliness and conceit. Some of it won't bear the light of day. But, mixed with all the trash, you will find truth. And that truth is the REAL YOU. Do not, if you care at all for your life, stifle that Real You. Find some expression for it; some way of satisfying its hunger. Live the noblest of your wishes, for in them lies your soul.

Worst Story I Have Heard Today

By WILL ROGERS.

They was two office boys that were having an awful row. They made a lot of noise. I reckon they was arguing about who was going to get off for the ball game next. Well, the boss called to Jimmie and says, "Say, Jimmie, whenever you've finished that argument with Red, I wish you'd go and get a dollar's worth of stamps for me."

So of course there wasn't any dollar's worth of stamps got. Next day, the boss says, "Jimmie, didn't I tell you to get me some stamps yesterday?"

"Oh, yes, that's right," he says. "But you said when I'd finished with Red. And I ain't started on that guy yet. I'm taking boxing lessons, just to get ready to finish it."

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS.

Youth

Toil and dust and heat
And the city's voices;
Yet all toil is sweet
When the heart rejoices.

Morn, with work ahead
Till the frame is aching,
All for roof and bread;
Still, a glad awaking!

Urge to know life's sweets,
All its song and laughter,
Certain that sore defeats
Must bring triumphs after.

Night, and the stars that rise
In promise shining,
To keep rare destinies
For youth's divining.

Youth, and the stars that move
Hearts to their mating;
Youth, and the lips of love
That are somewhere waiting!

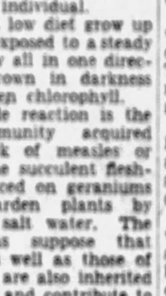
THE SCIENCE OF LIFE

By H. G. WELLS
In Collaboration With
Prof. Julian Huxley and George P. Wells.

SECTION 4—ARE ACQUIRED CHARACTERS INHERITED?

Lamarck, in his discussion of transformism in the later eighteenth century, believed that a species modified itself as a result of the cumulative inheritance of the efforts of its constituent individuals.

The ancestral giraffe stretches out its neck to reach the leaves of high trees; this elongation is transmitted to the offspring and thus, by generations of stretching, the species produces an innate elongation.



H. G. Wells

The blacksmith wields his hammer and his muscles swell and harden; as a result of his exertions his children (on a Lamarckian view) are the more muscular. White men venture southward into the tropics; as a protection from the blazing ultra-violet light their skins become tanned, and thus by generations of cumulative tanning the colored races of today are supposed to have arisen.

Lamarck held that, in the race as well as in the individual, exercising a faculty led to its further development. He did not invent this idea.

Its truth was generally assumed at his time, as applied to human pedigree or the breeding of domesticated races of animals, and had been so assumed for centuries. He simply adopted and extended the idea and showed how it might be imagined to play a part in evolution.

Moreover, he believed that neglected or unused parts shrunk away and finally disappeared; the classic example of this was the hind legs of the whale which were reduced to mere vestiges when these aquatic mammals gave up walking about on land and took to swimming in the sea.

In addition, the modern followers of Lamarck stress the inheritance of the direct efforts of the outer environment. Everyone is familiar with such direct modifications of the individual.

Animals on a low diet grow up stunted; trees exposed to a steady coast wind grow all in one direction; plants grown in darkness never form green chlorophyll.

A more subtle reaction is the individual immunity acquired after an attack of measles or small-pox or the succulent fleshly leaves produced on geraniums and many garden plants by watering with salt water. The neo-Lamarckians suppose that such effects, as well as those of use and disuse, are also inherited in their degree, and contribute to evolutionary change.

There are two ideas to disentangle here. One is the strictly biological problem: Do modifications imprinted on an organism during the rough-and-tumble of its lifetime affect the characters of its offspring at all? This is the problem with which as biologists we shall concern ourselves here. The other is the philosophical idea of the race perfecting itself by striving.

We need not concern ourselves with this side of the question: plants and bacteria evolve as well as we do, and they cannot be said to strive without distorting the world beyond recognition. And in any case, unless the biological question is answered in the affirmative, the philosophical does not arise.

It is clear enough that the problem is of vital interest, for if acquired characters can be inherited we would reasonably expect education and the effects of occupation to be inherited; we could hope that by nursing our children carefully we were imprinting a permanent improvement on the race and there would be no limit to the improvement which education and social betterment could make on the human race, however carelessly it bred.

Let us remember that there is a strong "common-sense" bias in favor of the inheritance of acquired characters. The tales of the giraffe, the blacksmith and the sunburn white, sound entirely plausible.

In the often-quoted example of the pointer-dog it is natural to assume that the dog stands rigid at the scent of game because he has been taught for generations to do so by his masters, and the habit has become an instinctive character of the race.

Yet, at the present day the majority of trained biologists have a definite bias against Lamarckian interpretations. Let us note their reasons for this opposition.

When Lamarck put forward his views, the chromosome machinery of inheritance was still unknown. The profoundly illuminating nature of its discovery is not often realized.

Darwin who believed in the inheritance of acquired characters as a subsidiary cause of evolution, suggested a purely theoretical mechanism to explain it.

A number of tiny particles, which he called gemmules, were supposed to be formed all over the body, and to swarm into the testes or ovaries by way of the bloodstream.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—When society reporters are stumped for the low-down on high sitters in the "400" world they do not consult Social Registers or Almanacks de Gotha. They consult Theodore—Theodore of the Ritz, most famous of all headwaiters and an encyclopedia of the elect.

For more than 20 years in New York, London, Paris, Berlin and Constantinople he has been humoring rich students of gastronomy. He has bestowed his oddly imperious bow of obeisance upon dukes, princes, Wall street millionaires and other possessors of the earth, including kings.

Brillat-Savarin declared feeding kings was equivalent to ruling empires. This was the excellent exaggeration of an excellent cook, but certainly Theodore has a world of his own over which he rules—amiably, suavely but ever firmly.

I have been observing Theodore for years, and his art of seating an undesirable behind a palm next to the orchestra bass drum smacks of wizardry. He does it so graciously the patron instead of feeling slighted is bewitched. He comes back for more.

Theodore, it strikes me, is at his best at lunch time. When he stands at the portals in gray morning suit with a lapel nosegay of white and eye glass ribbon of black—every inch the aristocrat. He suggests the poised eagle, ready to swoop down and carry something desirable away.

But Theodore's swoop is to carry some favored satrap to a select table and express in oleaginous murmurs his pleasure and solicitation. Theodore is an old friend, and I have at times tried to puncture his gravity with a little kidding. It cannot be done. He takes his job as seriously as Einstein.

When the last light in his cafe is dimmed at night, Theodore slips into business clothes, leaves his post by a private entrance, steps into a purring limousine and is whisked away. An hour later he is among the flowers, books and collection of rare paintings at his Westchester estate.

It was Lucius Beebe who wrote of Theodore: "He differentiates urbanus from rusticus, separates civilization from barbarism." I shall remember Theodore for an amazing display of trigger thinking. On a sweltering night, years ago, Theodore's roof was packed. A debutante who had too many cocktails was swaying about the dance floor with an embarrassed escort. Suddenly she slipped out of his arms. Somewhere a quick hand-clap and lights were out. A few seconds later when they came on, the lady was on a chaise lounge in an anteroom. Theodore, calm, impecable, was bowing to arrivals at his silk rope. Few realized, least of all the debutante, his quick thinking saved the lady not only from scandal but possible tabloid headlines.

Theodore's full name, incidentally, is Theodore Szarvis. He was born in Hungary, and one of his close friends is Ferenc Molnar, Hungarian dramatist. A standard character in many novels of E. Phillips Oppenheim is a headwaiter whom many recognize as Theodore. The British writer and Theodore are friends of the maitre d'hotel's London days. Theodore married an English lady, and they are parents of three children, one a son, has made strides as an artist.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

"Do come and see us; you know you are welcome at any time."

You have received such invitations many times.

Usually it is a figure of speech and little more than that.

Comparatively few are anxious to have you visit them.

In an effort to entertain guests home routine is disturbed and family desires are thwarted.

Of course, if you are a person of prominence or one who has accomplished out of the ordinary things invitations may be made with the hope that you will accept them.

Then they become a personal matter with the one who invites you.

It is hoped, perhaps, that you may strengthen his or her social position or add to prestige.

There is not much for you in being entertained in a home that asks you as a guest for purely selfish reasons.

If you would be popular with many people don't make extensive demands on them, using them and their resources for your convenience.

To be sure, you have some good friends who are sincere in wishing to see you at any time, but you must have sense enough to discriminate between whether it is kind for you to accept hospitality or not, even when invited.
